Coastal protection

Once again the coastal bill is so close, and yet so far from being passed by the state legislature. Like the Bielenson Bill, the new coastal bill proposed by State Senator Jerry Smith has come a long way, only to be endangered by the Senate Finance Committee.

There are things wrong with the California Coastal Plan, not the least of which is its vagueness and its internal contradictions. There have also been problems with the coastal permit system and what has, at times, seemed capriciousness on the part of commissioners.

But it is our feeling that the California coast needs the protection of state legislation. Leaving the development of the coast to local entities has simply not worked in the past, and is unlikely to work in the future. California needs a coastal bill, and we urge the passage of SB 1277.

Debates

Dear Editor:

Backed by the conviction that Presidential Debates will make sure that issues not images will enable voters to elect the most qualified person to the presidency, the League of Women Voters of the United States plans to sponsor four televised debates this fall between major party presidential candidates. If the League is successful, Americans will see the first discussions of key national issues by presidential adversaries since Nixon and Kennedy faced each other in 1960, sixteen years ago.

In order to accomplish this the League feels it will be necessary to demonstrate to the candidates the keen interest Americans have in seeing such a debate. To that end League members all over the country are collecting signatures on petitions to be presented to the two major candidates urging them to appear. The petition slogan is "Presidential Debates: Equal Time for Issues" and states, "We, the people, urge the major party candidates for president to meet in public debate on the issues facing the country."

We need the support of all Monterey Peninsulans to reach the goal of 8,000 signatures (our share of the 4,000,000 sought nationally) by September 10th. Anyone may sign this petition. You do not need to be a legal resident of the area or 18 years old but simply support the idea of debate between the two major presidential candidates. Look for this petition throughout the Monterey Peninsula starting August 21st.

Bach Festival

Dear Editor:

The letter of Mr. Huntley questioning the appearance of West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt at the opening of the Bach Festival requires a reply:

Tickets for the Schmidt party were not acquired at the last moment but were purchased anonymously many months ago, presumably through the West German consulate. The festival management was not advised of the Chancellor's attendance until very shortly before the concert.

Security measures on behalf of visiting heads of state are arranged through the Department of State in coordination with the visitor's own protective agency and not the Bach Festival. If Mr. Huntley questions their stringency he should contact his representatives in Washington.

Panama Canal

Dear Editor:

High State Department officials warn that if we do not relinquish our claim on the Panama Canal it will eventually develop into another Vietnam.

Many of us do not interpret that as a State Department warning at all; we interpret it as a threat. Many of us believe that high State Department officials purposely created the Vietnam nightmare; they then purposely assured American defeat by insisting on their no-win policy.

Now it seems that they are threatening us with that same type of disaster if we do not quietly surrender the Panama Canal. We feel that the real problem lies within the State Department.

We feel that a thorough house cleaning from top to bottom in the State Department is long, long overdue. We say, "Save the Panama Canal, give them Henry Kissinger instead."

Sunday series

Dear Editor:

In summer when Nature ensures that often skies are blue and sunshine comes through, we of the Peninsula look forward to a hopeful event. Of course, I refer to the Sunday afternoon Concert Season at Carmel's outdoor Forest Theater.

As everyone knows, it is located on a hill lined with rows of benches. Its stage is near the bottom of the slope. How lovely are its surroundings.

Tall trees form an inspiring canopy all about. Yet much of it is not shaded. Sun worshippers there — easily recognized by their overdone exposure, especially of bright red noses — can indulge in their rituals of soaking up the sun's rays. At the same time their eyes, ears and minds can concentrate on the performance.

Unfortunately some of the events are not of a nature to reward the discriminating personality. Such a person expects a high degree of beauty, of wholesome entertainment befitting a rational human being. Dancing must be graceful, singing appealing, drama worthy, humor of a better type. Whatever is worthy of an intelligent, refined, civilized human being should be reflected on the stage.

Instead we get a times programs of nonsensical antics, ugly poses, nutty sounds, peculiar actions, terrible music to shock the rational observer who came to witness a rewarding performance. One can close one's eyes and think for a moment that he was transferred to some mental institution, where some of the worst cases have been induced to stage an act. Or, a spectator at an exhibition of results of dope addiction.

Why the discordant chanting, the silly words, the irrational poses and dancing? If some of our cavemen ancestors could be resurrected, undoubtedly they would feel "at home" watching such stupidities. If members of the most primitive tribes now on earth could be flown to the Forest Theater, undoubtedly they would feel someone there "stole their stuff." The groans, the odd chants, the rolling eyes and shocking actions would undoubtedly seem as familiar routines of theirs.

I feel that Carmel-by-the-Sea, blessed by so much of natural charm and human culture that draws visitors from everywhere, can do better. I have seen, in past years, far more worthy entertainment at Forest Theater. I am sure that better performances will take place in coming weeks. But just like "a rose is a rose is a rose," as a poet told the world long ago, so junk is junk is junk.

Once upon a time...

by Frank Lloyd

Some of the more valuable real estate in Carmel, outside the commercial zone, lies near the foot of Ocean Avenue, where the blacktop meets the white sands of the Pacific Ocean's shore.

If what was once there remained today, there might be considerable trouble paving in that direction, building houses adjacent to the dunes, and establishing the parking lot for those who wish to sun and foregather socially thereabouts.

Cries might ring out about the three-toed salamander, as they did a while back on the Santa Cruz side of Monterey Bay when a pond was threatened by development. In the case of the foot of Ocean Avenue there were once extensive ponds where, for all we know, the three-toed salamander made its breeding place.

Certainly this was the spawning pond for the toads of old Carmel-by-the-Sea, many of whom became my personal friends and had their adobes along San Carlos street where to make this roadway a scraper had cut banks in the sand which formed small cliffs just made for toad habitation.

The pond would be almost a jelly at times with the strings of toad eggs to be found there. The source of all the water was the drainage down Ocean Avenue from much of the area north of Ocean Avenue and south of the Fourth Avenue gully. It was just enough of a watershed to provide a seasonal pool, shallow but wide.

How many hundreds of thousands of pollywogs swam there would have been anyone's guess, but the few that struggled forth against the odds of a prolific and chancey world of natural selection, survival of the fittest and all that, soon found a wonderfully sandy subdivision much to their liking.

The little sandy cliffs were great for scraping out caves into which just one toad would fit. These holes were obvious to any small boy filled with curiosity and a hand could soon bring out a lethargic fellow, all covered with beautiful warts — if you thought a wart could be beautiful — and ready to exude a strange wetness of highly unpleasant odor, the juice which was supposed to give you warts also.

Can you see that entranced young fellow in the suitings of the time? Buster Brown bobbed hair cut, Knickerbocker suit with a belted jacket and pants with the legs turned back above the knees; long black cotton stockings, brown shoes, well scuffed; open white shirt with a neck that quickly collected color from the sand; on top of all a cloth cap over sallow face and big eyes.

In the hands was held a sleepy but uneasy troglodyte. For toads, like possums, are inclined to let the world go by rather than face trouble head-on, and so will rest in the hand unless put down again to begin their plopping way. Once they hike their odorous statement, they will just wait for whatever outcome follows, philosophically blinking their upraised eyes against the unfamiliar light.

Below the toad pond was that wide stretch of beach where the old bath house once stood, a little to the southward, and it is said a small pier once ran out into the bay, and certainly a heavy rope life line had been installed, and for a while there was also a rowboat available for lifesaving. It was great fun to row out through the surf and ride the boat in until threatened with a dumping at which point it was judicious to go overboard and let'er go.

Soft drinks were available at the bath house which the Walter Bashams operated, and dry towels and swim suits (really suits!) were available. Behind its glass protection it was possible to toast on a bright and windy day.

Later on, these same Bashams opened their soda fountain which evolved into Whitney's, when Willard Whitney and his wife took advantage of the repeal of Prohibition. And, once upon a time, Jimmy "Buster" Doud, after Abalone League softball games, would lounge against car fenders and wait for pretty girls for whom he would buy chocolate parfaits — when Ivy Basham still reigned.

But all these are gone, Jimmy Doud lives in retirement in Honolulu in seigneurial grandeur. The Bashams and the Whitneys are dead, and even their names are erased from Ocean Avenue establishments.

So are the toads, and if there were ever any three-toed salamanders in the now lost Ocean Avenue pond, they too are not there; nor are the pink salamanders and the little brown ones. But Marj Adams only the other day said she still finds these last little fellows under the oak leaves in her well watered (or it used to be) back yard.

And so with Snoopy in the Peanuts Comic strip, in reference to the parking area now found where Ocean Avenue greets the beach: "YOU STUPID PEOPLE!! You're parking on my memories!!!"

California business forecast poor

Carmel continues to prosper

By Irene Gaasch

California is not a very promising area for business growth according to a survey of executives conducted by the state Commission for Economic Development. Carmel business is certainly the exception. It has been booming say local store owners who feel that business this year is better than it has been in the past.

Despite commission director Steven Smith's discouraging words, Carmel business continues to increase. Smith's questionnaires about California's business climate were mailed to 646 of the state's top businessmen. The report, issued in May of this year, is based on the 306 questionnaires that were returned.

Almost 62 per cent of the executives said they did not believe California to be very promising for business growth.

Yet almost without exception, Carmel businessmen have found business here to be more than it was at this time last year, and very promising for growth.

Although sales were heavier in May according to one retailer selling housewares, business has been good and sales are higher than they were at this time last year. The store manager felt there was more business from groups. "In fact," she said, "they (shoppers) seem to come in waves."

It was the general consensus among businessmen interviewed that May was a better month for sales than June and July have been.

Reasons for Carmel's unique and successful business climate are many. Richard Rittmaster owner of a prestigious clothing store in Carmel credits Carmel's "quality feeling" for its good business climate. He says he rates an area by the number of quality lodgings and restaurants, and in his opinion, Carmel certainly has many.

Rittmaster, who says he has regular customers all over the country, feels people come to Carmel to find something a little different. "Merchants here try to accommodate this feeling," said Rittmaster and provide merchandise of a quality nature. Although he feels there are many types of businesses in Carmel, some that do not keep this tradition of quality, he does not see this as affecting Carmel's image. "A lot of different kind of people come to Carmel," Rittmaster said, "and they have different needs."

"Historically, Carmel is a village of small owner-operated businesses," said Rittmaster. Large stores are moving in here, he says; and he finds they have "done reasonably well" in keeping with Carmel's quality traditions.

Businessman and Councilman David Hughes, owner of David, believes city services in Carmel, along with its beauty, and fine selection of goods is one reason for people's positive shopping attitude here. He sees Carmel as "the most sophisticated small village on the west coast."

He complimented the police force for the excellent job they do in handling emergencies. He cited two cases he had personally seen in the last week. "Within minutes of the person's falling, there was an ambulance there and a paramedic giving first aid," said Hughes, adding "and no traffic jam." But it's more than emergency care, Hughes says, for even the regular services, such as handling traffic, are done with courtesy.

Hughes quotes a former employee of his who said, "The best service in the world is one you don't notice." That is how he feels the Carmel services are. "People aren't aware of the maintenance crews and the police as they keep things going and I think that speaks well for Carmel." Hughes compared Carmel to other resort towns he had been to recently and the difference in services is highly noticeable. The smoothness just isn't there says Hughes.

Not all businessmen agree with Hughes on Carmel services. Milton Williams, owner of the Shop in the Garden, says many shopper's first question is, "Where's the nearest restroom?", and next, "Is there any place we can sit down? I just don't understand why we can't provide these services for our tourists," he says.

Williams, who feels Carmel changed years ago from a small village, finds these changes "kind of sad." "But I don't think the visitors are disappointed. Every once in a while we get someone who saw Carmel 30 years ago and is coming back for the first time since then, and they are disappointed in the changes they see. But in general, most people are delighted," said Williams.

Williams says people come to Carmel to find something different. "And they still can, although there's a lot of merchandise here that they can find in the bigger cities. But it (merchandise) still has a ring if they can say, 'I got it in Carmel,'" says Williams.

"We now get customers who came in our shop as children, who are now bringing their children here. My wife and I get a real thrill out of that," adds Williams.

Joe Regelski of Books Inc.

in Carmel Plaza says Carmel's business climate offers all the sophistication of the larger shopping centers and all the friendliness of the small home town. "Have you ever asked for directions in San Francisco? People there just don't have time for you. We're pleased that the book store is sort of a semi-official library. People come in and ask where to go for a good meal or a drink of water. We like the freedom, the nice and easiness that's here, and that's what I think the visitor's like," says Regelski.

Lanz manager Barbara Van Hagen says shoppers sometime complain about the lack of parking lots. "We smile and tell them if they want parking lots, perhaps they should try San Francisco," she says. She does point out that most people don't mind having to walk and really appreciate the fact that Carmel doesn't have stop lights on every corner.

Most of the businessmen don't feel the crowds in Carmel are larger this summer than they were last summer. Richard Rittmaster notices that there are more younger tourists coming to Carmel. "There's more of an age-mix than there was in 1970," he said. "I seem to notice a lot more tennis players."

He feels more Californians are beginning to visit Carmel, mostly from Southern California. He says his customers from that area have a difficult time getting flights to this area because they are always filled.

Hughes finds that a more affluent shoppers are coming to Carmel. "Of course since last summer, we have rebuilt and reaimed our business (at David) but a year ago we were selling loads of puka shells and liquid silver and now it's antique Chinese and Russian jewelry," he says. Hughes notices more European tourists in Carmel. "I don't know if there are more than there were last year," he says. "I notice many more French speaking people. There are a lot of Canadians here this year."

"We've got a strange breed of regulars from all over the nation," says Joe Regelski. "I have noticed more foreign accents this year, but I don't feel as if there are more tourists from Europe," he says. "Our business has evened out year round, and we seem to have as many local people in the store as we do tourists," he says, commenting that sales are "up phenomenally".

Only one merchant said sales were a "little slow" but still rated them as good. "Carmel is still on people's lists as the place to go to find something neat, and to have a pleasant experience," says Milton Williams. "And I doubt if that will ever change."

City income estimates up

Although it is still far too early to tell for certain, Carmel officials have the feeling that this summer will once more be the biggest one ever for Carmel's tourist industry.

Final sales tax and hostelry tax figures for the summer won't be in until September, but city finance officer Ralph Cowen sees a bumper year for city revenues generated by visitors. First quarter figures for 1976 show taxable transactions of over $3,000,000 for the apparel stores in Carmel. Other retail stores showed $2,500,000 in taxable transactions for the same period. Because of summer visitors, second quarter sales are generally better, which would verify Cowen's predictions for the period.

Cowen expects the hostelry tax to be up by 20 to 25 per cent over the second calendar quarter of last year (actually 40 to 45 per cent higher, but the tax rate increased by 20 per cent this year).

Police Chief Bill Ellis says the number of traffic tickets handed out has risen once again this year over last.

Ellis has also seen a dramatic increase in tour buses, despite Grey Line's strike earlier in the year, and especially a dramatic increase in out-of-state tour buses.

Although parking accidents remain at about the same level, according to Ellis, city forester Greg D'Ambrosio has noticed a hearty increase in traffic damage on public works vehicles and on the city's trees and shrubs.

Vegetation, D'Ambrosio says, is suffering from pollution damage more this year, and the trampling of plants has gotten worse. The most noticeable effect of increased tourist traffic, D'Ambrosio claims, is on the beach where there is more litter than ever. And the department's weekend duty has gotten much more challenging.

The Carmel Business Association has noticed an increase in inquiries — up from 240 in May 1975 to 401 this May, and up from 417 in June 1975 to 653 this year.

It all seems to add up to a busy year for Carmel, but city officials do not seem worried.

As Chief Ellis says: "It's just the same organized confusion going on downtown."

PENCILS SHARP? SCHOOL OPENS NEXT MONDAY

Sunset school will open for the fall term next Monday, August 30. The class that graduated in June was the first graduating class in the new school, and this class, the class of 1927 is the first class to start their senior year in the new school. The old building has been razed and an improved playground, and it is hoped some day tennis courts will take its place. There is already in place a see-saw that Mr. George Best kindly gave the pupils.

Miss Mary Powers, the principal, will teach the eighth grade; Mrs. Florence Thorton, the seventh; Miss Pauline Newman is in charge of the fifth and sixth grades, and will also teach music; Miss Miriam White will teach the fourth grade, and Miss Geneva Christmas will be in charge of the first and second. The only new teacher on the role is Miss Jetti Askew who will teach the first grade.

Carmel "out-ranks" the Peninsula in the new officers of Monterey Peninsula Post, American Legion, the election having been recently held. Moreover the rankers are kept right in the family.

L.D. Gottfried, general contractor, was elected commander of the post, and his brother-in-law, Dohald L. Hale, vice commander.

Hale's war record includes five major engagements in France including Chateau Thierry. Gottfried went over with the engineers as a private and won his way to a lieutenant's commission.

Carmel exclusively represented Peninsula Post No. 41 at the recent American Legion state convention at Susanville. The Monterey Peninsula was represented there — and thoroughly, it is understood — by a delegation composed of Paul Flanders, J.W. Whitney and William Frolli, all from over this side of the hill.

CARMEL ARTISTS TAKE TOP HONORS AT COUNTY FAIR

Lee Randolph of Carmel was announced Grand Prize winner in the Fine Arts Exhibit at the Monterey County Fair. His oil painting, the Lighthouse, was awarded a silver cup and grand honors by the judges at the opening of the fair yesterday.

In the division of traditional oils at the exhibit, Bert Simmons of Carmel won first prize. The second prize, and his second award went to Lee Randolph. In the traditional water color section, Helmuth Grunig of Salinas won top honors. Second prize was awarded Helen Dooley of Carmel and third to Virginia Curtis of Carmel.

Richard Lofton of Carmel won first prize in the modern oils section, with second going to Joe L. Ataid of Pacific Grove and third to Pauline Pierson of Carmel. In modern water colors, Nick Hetrova of Carmel won first honors.

COMMUNITY CHEST ANNOUNCES CHAIRMAN FOR 1951 FUND DRIVE

The budget committee of the Community Chest has rounded our committee hearings and expects to announce the Community Chest goal for this year sometime before September 1, according to Stanley Pedder, chairman of the budget committee.

For the Carmel district, chairmen in charge of soliciting committee are Albert Lester, Peninsula chairman, Mrs. Edmond Sullivan, in charge of the Carmel residential area; Rollow Payne in charge of the business units; Edgar Haber and Lee Crowe, co-chairmen for Carmel Valley; the William Fassetts of Nepenthe for the Big Sur area, and Malcolm Millard for Carmel Highlands.

Sunday's event, which this year celebrates the 50th year of Carmel's incorporation as a city, is the 9th Summer Sunday program presenting free of charge in Carmel's municipal outdoor by the Arts Commission.

CUSD STUDENTS GIVEN PSYCHOLOGICAL HELP

Psychological services are provided for students needing such help in the Carmel Unified School District by means of an agreement between the board of education and the Superintendent of Schools for Monterey County. Ed Coffin. During the 1966-67 academic year, the county superintendent's office will provide psychologists in Carmel district for three days each week. This is the same amount of service as we provided last year and proved most satisfactory. The Carmel districts will pay the county $8,250 for this service.

Dick Bragg

By IRENE GAASCH

While working with the County Industrial Development project, Dick Bragg became appalled at the number of persons who couldn't read, write or do simple arithmetic. This inspired him to run for membership on the County Board of Education, a position he's held for over seven years now.

"What I've discovered is, it isn't that easy. You just can't walk into a board of education and change the world," says Bragg.

Bragg, who assumed the presidency of the board last April, points out that he is not a professional member of the staff. He noted that he is an elected official in a service position, something most people don't realize. He describes the County Office of Education as a service and regulatory agency operating as an arm of the State office of Education. Bragg says its main functions are to approve individual school district budgets and to administrate state programs as prescribed by state law.

Many of these programs are offered in the form of services such as close circuit classes, a film library, and a Library of State approved text books. These are on display at the office, not only for teachers, but any interested person, notes Bragg.

As an individual board member, he feels it is his responsibility to see that these services provided by the County Office of Education are reaching the various schools within the district. He points to the assistance Carmel has received with its Early Childhood Education program as an example.

Bragg regrets the fact that so few people outside the field of education are aware of the county office and its services. He says, "There's no romance to it (the county office) since no one out of education gets involved in it."

Because he likes personal involvement, Bragg is contemplating running for a position on the Carmel School Board, mainly

Cooperation key to county's role

A neatly landscaped brick building on the outskirts of Salinas is the home of the Monterey County Office of Education.

Although the staff consists of about 100 people and the programs are well known to the educational community, president of the County Board of Education Dick Bragg estimates that of the 270,000 people the office serves only about 10 people outside of the educational community are aware of the offices and its services.

As described by the state, the County Office of Education is to be an intermediary unit between the State Department of Education and the local school districts.

The Monterey County Office of Education maintains the philosophy that the County Office "should provide county-wide leadership and support, contributing to a strong instructional program from kindergarten through community college."

County Superintendent James Stefan says the county office provides this leadership and support through the many services it gives to the school districts. In fact, he sees the providing of these services as the major job for the county offices.

Stefan points out that there are 27 school districts in Monterey County, each autonomous. According to Stefan, there are about 65,000 students in the system who are served by approximately 2,800 teachers and 200 administrators.

"There's a lot of variety within the county school districts," says Stefan, which he says is to be expected in a county of this size. He notes that Monterey County has three one-room schools within the district which serve as quite a contrast to its largest school district, Monterey.

"The County Office of Education is charged by law to give more services to the smaller school districts," says Stefan. The reason for this, explains Stefan, is that the state assumes that the smaller school districts are less able to employ specialized personnel. He says in effect, the county office serves as supplemental staff to these districts.

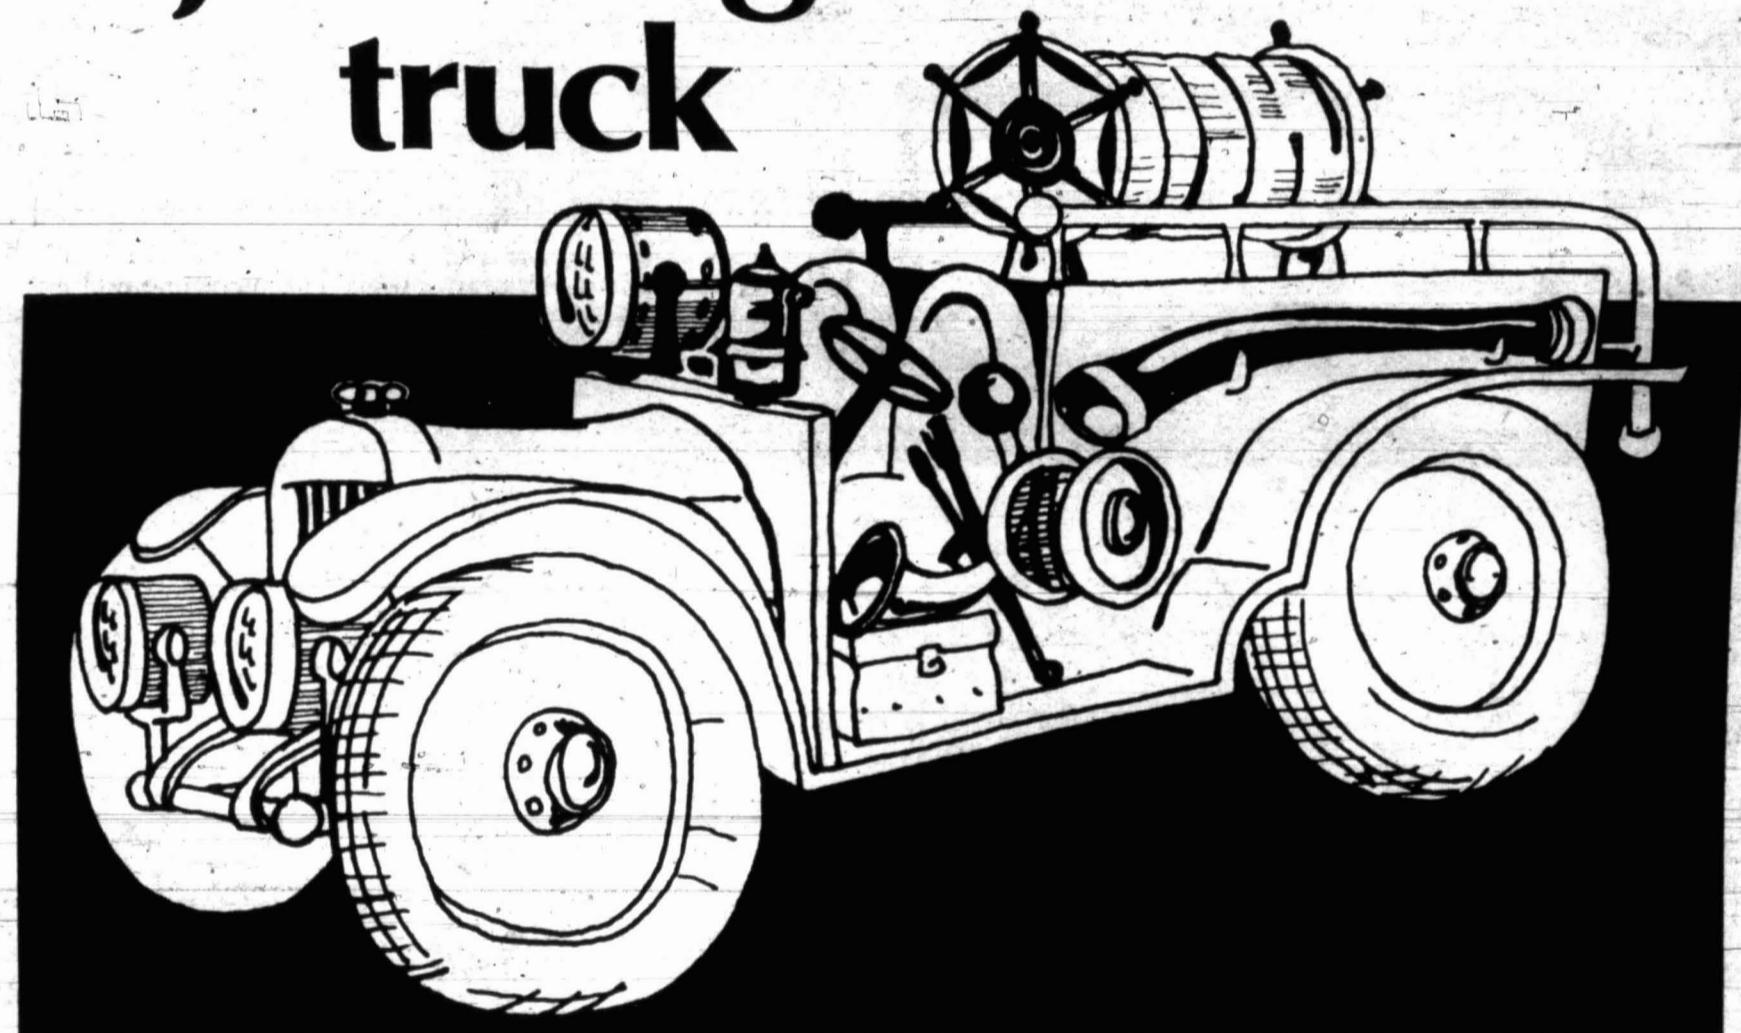

Carmel is a moderate-sized district and is one of the four unified districts within the county. A unified district is one that has co-terminous boundaries and has the same administrative structure from kindergarten through grade 12, explains Stefan. In his opinion, a unified district is easier to work with because it has a more uniform educational program and a better sense of continuity.

Since services offered by the county office depend on individual needs within the district, many districts, Carmel being one, just look to the County Office for advice, research material and assistance in special programs.

The county office is organized into four divisions: administration and business, educational services, instructional materials and media, and special schools and classes.

The administration and business branch administers and maintains a program of service and information on

Without water a fire engine is just a big red truck

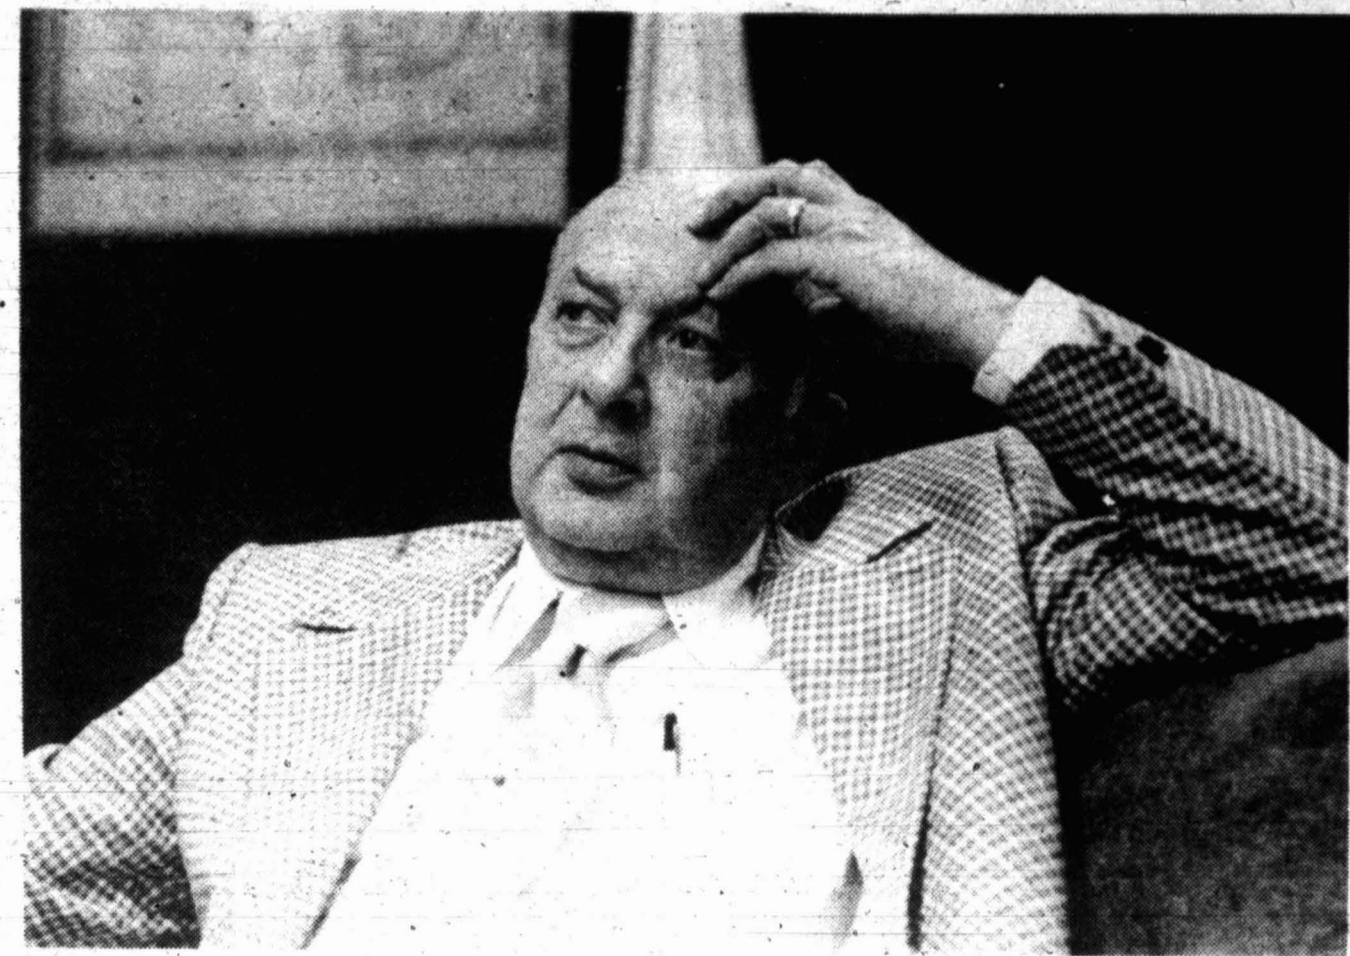

Americans once thought water, a life-sustaining resource, was limitless. Our lives are geared toward consumption, not conservation. We often lose sight of the fact there will never be substantially more water than we have now. Nature's hydrological cycle of seawater to clouds to rain and snow to streams that run to the sea merely maintains our water supply . . . it does not create more water. The cycle follows the unknown plan of nature, making us dependent on the unpredictable skies for our water supply. For health, for safety and for the future, we must save water now.

Think Water Conservation. Every day.

 because he's concerned with the variation and quality within Carmel schools. Also, basically, he feels that the education system is still not producing people who can master reading, writing and basic math. He does not think it is the fault of the schools, "I firmly believe, good education begins at home," he says.

"Historically California school districts are run by home rule, and you have to take what home rule gives you," says Bragg. Lately he's been thinking that perhaps it would be more effective to be on an individual school board. "Not that I think it would be easy to change the system or that it would make any immediate changes," he intoned, "I just feel that it would possibly be more effective."

Bragg, a retired public relations man, has always had an interest in education, which he says was enhanced by his own children's education. His youngest son is now a senior in Carmel High School. His other two children are both in the media field. His daughter is a graphic artist in Carmel Valley and his son is in the radio-television field in Los Angeles.

He and his wife, Virginia make their home in Carmel. Being semi-retired allows Bragg the time to really be involved in community activities, which is something he seems to thrive on.

Before coming west, he was editor and publisher of his town paper in Ohio. Since retiring he has worked in radio and television and served as host on a community talk show on Channel 13. Currently he is teaching a course in human relations to civilian personnel at Fort Ord.

Teaching and learning seem to have played a large part in Dick Bragg's life. The public relations field has given him contact with all aspects of the population, he says, and has furthered his interest in education.

"When I was in high school, I was told that education meant to learn to think," says Bragg, indicating that this is still his basic feeling.

He says in his talks with people about education, they say they want to get back to basics. "Then they really don't know what the basics are." Actually, he feels that what the basics are would be defined differently by most people. In his opinion, music and art are as basic and as valuable in a school curriculum as reading and writing. Bragg is sorry there is not school orchestra in Carmel and defines this as a lack in basics.

He feels that more television instruction by the county would bring more variety with quality to the various school districts in the county. Bragg says this is especially true of the smaller districts who can't afford the specialist, and even for moderate-sized districts as Carmel.

Bragg describes himself as a strong supporter of vocational education, which he prefers to call career education. "This is practical education and I would like to see more of it in our schools," he explains. He says this would mean more items in the school curriculum such as how to balance a check book, file an income tax form or how to fill out job applications.

He recalled a job he had with a cosmetics firm. After delivering a lecture on good grooming habits at various high schools, the firm administered a survey-type test on grooming. Bragg says, "In processing these tests, I recorded 37 different spellings of the word deodorant. I found this unbelievable. It jarred me into realizing what's going on in schools, or what's not going on."

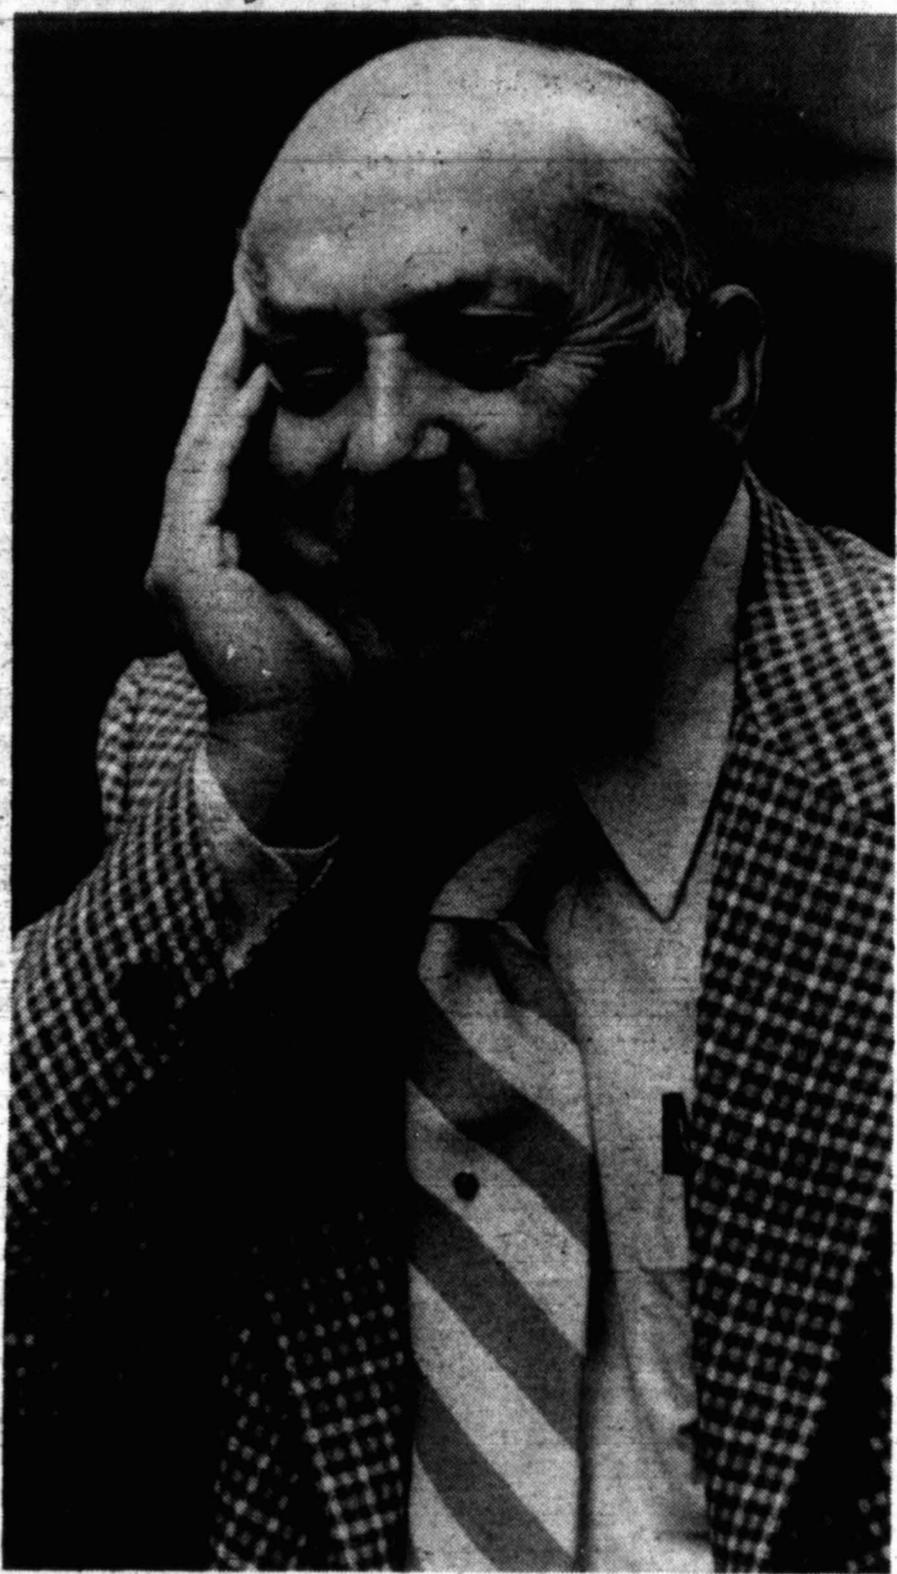

Bragg indicates that this example was all too typical of his experiences in working with people. Again, he points out that the schools just have a part to play in education.

"Education has mushroomed since Sputnik (Russia's first space venture). "There was an over reaction to Sputnik," says Bragg. He feels it caused an over-emphasis on scientific studies. "It was the same thing when sex education first started in the schools," he says. "It created such a terrific rumble." As with Sputnik, says Bragg, people were concerned with whose going to do the teaching," indicates Bragg, noting he would like to see more people with this concern.

Bragg says he's not a professional in the educational field. He has come into education through the business field and because of his personal concern. This is the reason for his practical approach to education, in his opinion. He has found that working with people is a good way to find out their needs. Now he would like to see education become responsive to these needs, which he feels is one of the true purposes of educational systems.

school district business and finance. Some of the administrative duties include the handling of the payroll for all county public school employees, providing legal and financial information, and offering budgetary advice to the school districts within the county.

The educational services branch offers consulting services to the districts on various educational programs. They maintain special services such as the Head Start Program, the Monterey County Youth Corps Program and the Early Childhood Education program.

Carmel's Early Childhood Education program at River School is one of the finest in the county, says Stefan. The Carmel district makes good use of the special consultants that the county provides, according to Stefan.

"Carmel has a high academic achievement level" says Stefan, pointing out that it has a high socio-economic level which usually goes "hand in hand" with the high achievement level.

Listing all of the educational services offered by the County Office would be like listing the courses offered within a school. Consultants are provided for many fields including art, and counseling as well as staff evaluation programs.

Special in-service classes are held periodically throughout the year for the teachers. These programs are to provide the teachers with new educational materials and ideas. The county office offers these programs on a voluntary basis, although attendance is mandatory in some of the school districts.

The instructional materials and media branch maintains an audio-visual department with over 8,000 different films which may be checked out by the teachers. Besides serving as a repository for state approved text books, the county maintains a large reference library for teachers to use. There is a cablecasting studio where instructional programs may be produced for use within the district.

Adult education is just one of the many classes under the auspices of the county office's special classes branch. They operate Head Start programs in several towns and maintain classes for educable mentally retarded, trainable mentally retarded, and physically or mentally handicapped persons. The county office also has a speech therapy program and a hearing testing program, both circulate throughout the county.

Each school district within the county pays a fee based on the number of students within the district. But the fee is not directly related to the amount of services the school district may receive, according to Stefan. He says the services given relate directly to the need, with the smaller school district receiving the largest number of services as prescribed by California law.

"Our whole organization depends on cooperative spirit," says Stefan. He notes that the county office has no direct authority over any of the individual school boards and that the individual boards have no authority over the county offices.

"You can think of the county office as a transmitter of information from the state to the individual school boards within the county," says Stefan. "Our job is to find out the individual needs within the districts and to try to meet them. Then we offer the programs based on these needs."

Gordon Mortensen

Woodcuts prove to be hard work

By GINNY SMITH

Many people visualize an artist's life as a romantic, leisurely existence. But to Gordon Mortensen, a newcomer to the Carmel area, it is a full-time job. And not an easy one at that.

"It's a very unstable way of life," says Mortensen, who specializes in woodcut printing. "It is a slow field to break into, but by entering art shows, winning prizes, and gaining the attention of galleries across the country, I think I'm finally making it."

Each of Mortensen's prints is an intricate masterpiece of carving technique and color combination. They depict delicate scenes of rolling hills, meadows, silhouetted trees, and reflections.

Basically, a woodcut print begins with a scene drawn on a piece of wood. The board is carved, inked, and a piece of paper is pressed against its surface. The paper records color on all places where the wood was not carved. Then, more wood is carved away, and another color is applied to the board, and pressed against the paper.

This process goes on and on, possibly for up to 20 printings, before the entire picture on the board is carved away, and all the tonal qualities on the print are obtained. Most of Mortensen's prints combine 25 to 34 colors.

"There is almost no one I know of who uses my method of woodcut printing," says Gordon. Most artists use a different wood block for each printing. Gordon uses only one; carving, printing, then carving some more on the same block.

Gordon's printmaking is somewhat of a "family affair." Although he is solely responsible for all the artistic aspects of the prints (drawing the scene, carving the wood, and checking the copies of the prints for quality control) he has trained his brother-in-law, Ron, to do the actual time-consuming printing. His wife, Linda, does all the bookwork for their growing business. This includes keeping records of which prints have been sent to which galleries, which have been sold, and who owes them money.

Gordon and Linda moved to the peninsula from Minneapolis in March.

"Linda wanted to live in a warmer climate," says Gordon. So they flew to San Francisco in February, rented a car, and began to explore California, looking for a place to settle down. San Rafael did not meet their needs, and neither did Santa Barbara. Half-way in between, however, they discovered Carmel. Within a month they had packed up their belongings in Minneapolis, driven back to California, and moved into the three-bedroom house they had rented near the Carmel High School.

Gordon does all of his printing at home, so two of the bedrooms in his house have been converted to printing and carving rooms.

"This is Ron's bedroom," Gordon says, pointing to the printing room, "but he has to move that drying board to find his bed!"

The Mortensen's work on their woodcut printing business seven days a week, and a least eight hours a day.

Woodcut printing, as a salable art, has increased in popularity in the last few years. When Gordon was enrolled in the Minneapolis College of Art and Design in the early 1960s, there were very few classes offered in woodcutting. In fact, he became involved in this aspect of art in a roundabout way.

"Each year at school we had to take an elective," Gordon says. "The first year I took sculpture, but it was too dirty. Then I tried etching, but I didn't get along too well with that."

The next year he took a class in woodcuts. His interest, and talent, developed from there.

A career as a woodcut printer did not directly follow his graduation from college, however. From 1964-

69, Gordon painted portraits, which proved quite profitable, but not every satisfying.

"Portraits are probably about as commercial as an artist can get," Gordon says. They provide guaranteeable money, because the artist knows that the subject will buy the painting. But it is also frustrating work, because the artist has to wait for people to come to him; he can't just paint, they try to find buyers for his work.

In 1969 Gordon enrolled in the University of Minneapolis to do graduate work, and he began to develop his own technique and style of woodcut printing. He left school again in 1972, and began to build his career in the art of woodcutting. Now, except for an occasional portrait, he supports himself and his wife solely on the sale of woodcut prints.

"It's always more satisfying to do something you're good at," Gordon says, "and I'm better at woodcuts than portraits."

Gordon's unique style is gaining notoriety across the nation. His work is currently being displayed in fourteen galleries in the U.S., and he was recently selected by the Brooklyn Museum to hang his work in a special show entitled, "Thirty Years of American Printmakers." He has also been chosen to participate in The New Talent Exhibition, sponsored by the Associated American Artists in New York. The show will begin in November.

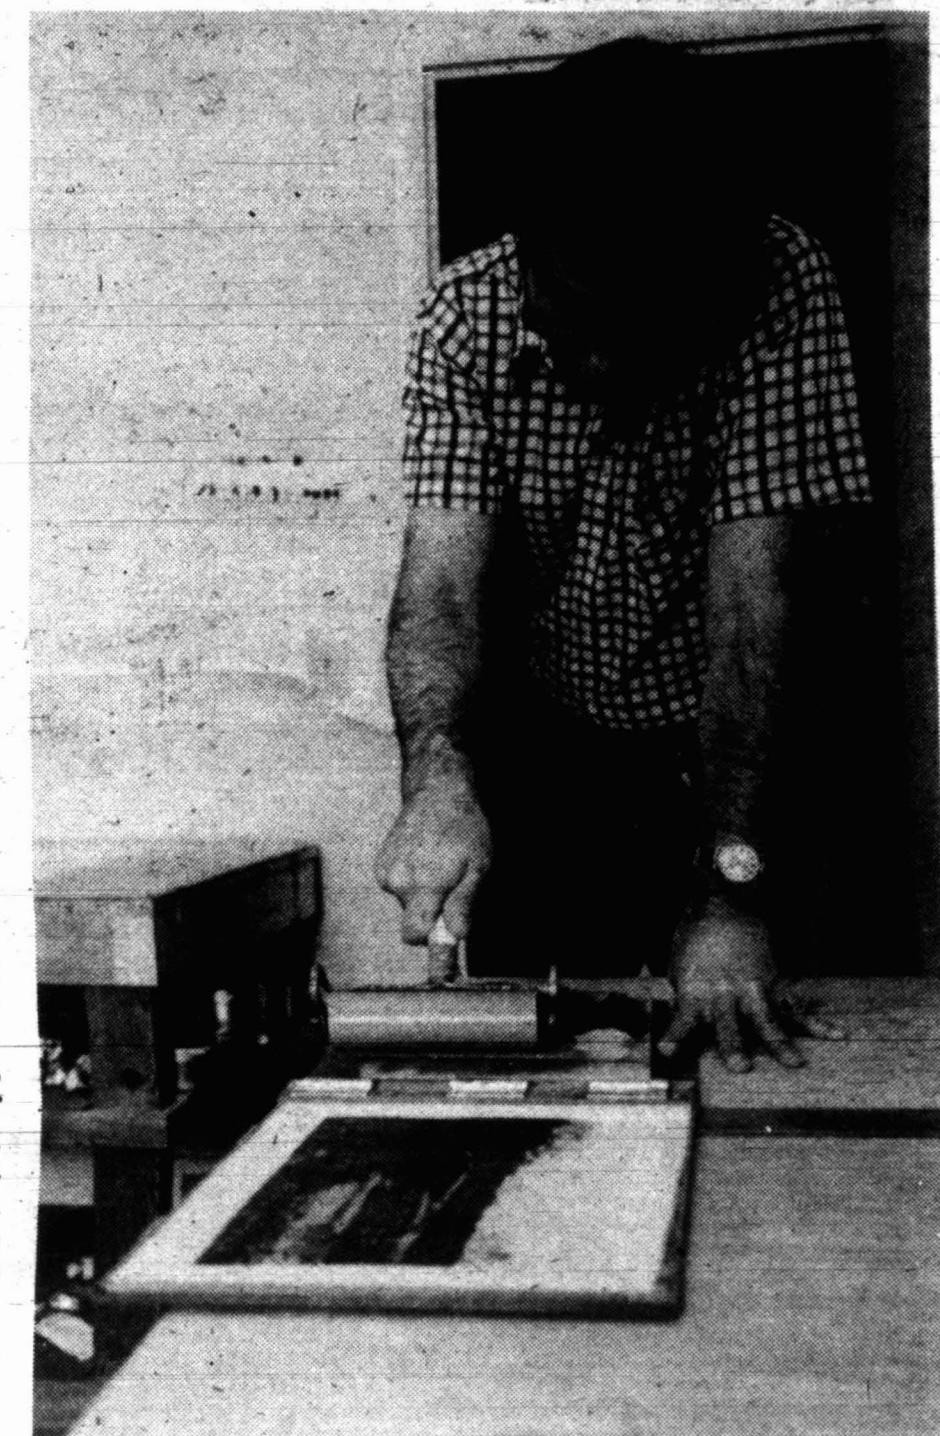

Although the Mortensen's are impressed with the scenery on the Peninsula, Gordon is not sure if he will be able to depict any coastal scenes in his artwork.

"I specialize in working with reflections," he says, "and the ocean doesn't have reflections."

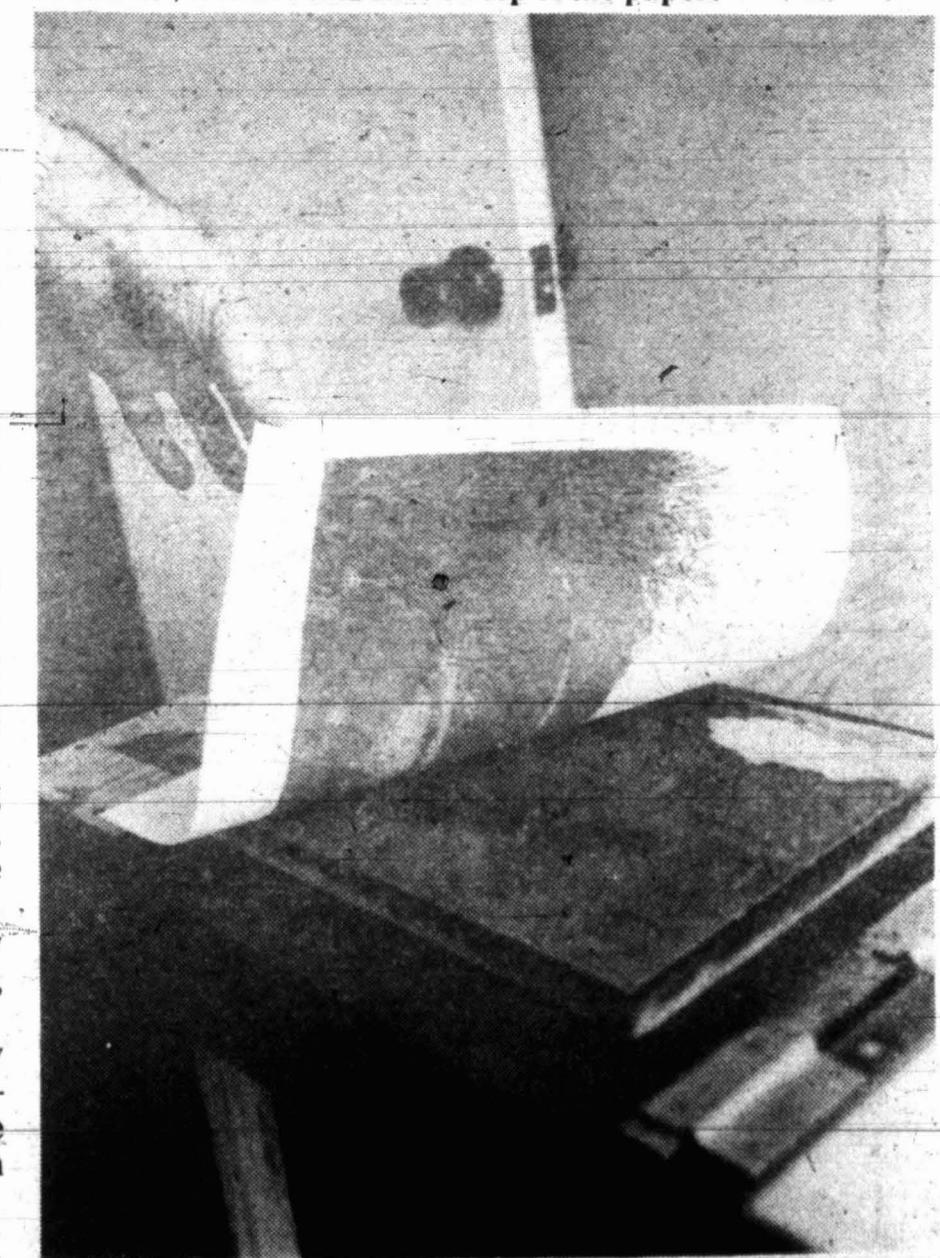

The surrounding hills may provide inspiration for him, however.

"There are so many greens, golds, and interesting patterns in these hills," he says. "I think I'm going to like it here."

Mortensen's work is being exhibited in Carmel at Village Artistry, on Dolores and Ocean.

THE PIECE OF PAPER, which may already have 10-20 layers of different colors of ink on it, is put in the "sandwich," the wood block, which makes up the other half of the sandwich, is inked and shot on top of the paper.

THE PAPER, with a new layer of ink on it, is peeled off the wood block. Often 20-30 layers of different colored ink are applied to the paper before the print is considered finished.

GORDON MORTENSEN carves away the portions of the wood block that he does not want a new layer of ink on.

HVMS concert

BY
IRVING W. GREENBERG

On Saturday and Sunday evenings, Aug. 14, 15, at the Santa Catalina Center for the Performing Arts, The Hidden Valley Music Seminars presented the second of its four scheduled concerts for this month, in a two-way program, but having only one purpose in mind — music of the ballet, either as orchestral suites or selections from ballets actually danced in performance. The principals involved in this program were the Hidden Valley Concert Orchestra conducted by Michael Zearott, and the dancers were Wayne Eagling and Marguerite Porter, Principal and Soloist of the Royal Ballet of England.

The opening selection was the Carmen Suite No. 1 by Bizet, which consisted of the following excerpts: Prelude, Aragonaise, Seguidille, Les dragons d'Alcala, and Les Torreadors. Michael Zearott, with his customary zeal, and exceptionally crisp, incisive, and forceful direction received responsive readings of these various sections from the Orchestra, in which all of the choirs played with brilliance, and expansive spaciousness. Mr. Zearott knows how to shape a phrase and hold a melodic line, thereby resulting in a performance that was most enjoyable and ingratiating to the listening audience.

The second orchestral selection was an orchestral suite from the ballet "Sylvia" by Leo Delibes. The prelude commences with mood music, and it was played with a warmth and a vitality, and with excellent sonority, particularly rising from the string section. In

"Les Chassooresses," describing a hunting scene, the dance music by the nymphs in front of the statue of Eros was luscious and luxuriant. The gentle, bucolic Intermezzo and the succeeding Valse Lente were rhythmic and compelling in their lyric and harmonic motivation and exposition.

In the dancede ballet section, Wayne Eagling and Marguerite Porter, as two white and silver figures executed the most famous "Pas de Deux" from Tchaikovsky's "Aurora's Wedding," the third act of the complete ballet "The Sleeping Beauty." In this dance, they displayed grace, charm, and a certain nobility, in which Mr. Eagling exhibited all of the elegance and beauty of his lovely partner. This dance ended in a series of spectacular turns and "fish dives," to music of mounting excitement, finally dying out on a sustained flute note and plucked strings. The prince's solo, as interpreted by Mr. Eagling, was in a lovely and diversified balletic art, while Aurora's solo (Miss Porter) was delicate, with finesse, and beautiful to look at. The final resumption of the "pas de deux" had all the color and visual representation in this art form where mime, motion, and music fuse into a synthetic union.

In the "Don Quixote" (Pas de Duex) by Minkus, arranged by Robert Irving, the two dancers, costumed in red, performed this particular divertissement, as well as the solos associated with it, with all the trappings and well-known artifices of ballet exposition, in a graceful and lovely evocation. Wayne Eagling was particularly compelling in one section of this dance, in solo form, where almost acrobatic feats were required, while Marguerite Porter displayed her intrinsic charm, beauty in graceful pirouettes and fouettes. However, perhaps due to the fact that not sufficient time had been allowed for rehearsals, there seemed to be a lack of coordination between the two dancers.

Also, it was to be regretted that the excellent Hidden Valley Concert Orchestra was hidden deep down in the pit, and could not be seen at all, the visibility of which is one of the exciting things about this youthful orchestra in its responsive and forceful performances.

At any rate, it was an evening of charming, but not very exciting music, the audiences in the main at these concerts of H.V.M.S. excepting more solid fare from the programming pieces, led by that dynamic and intrepid conductor, Michael Zearott.

The next concert will be at Sunset Center in Carmel, on Sunday, August 22.

'Jazz for chorus' at Forest Theater

The Hidden Valley Music Seminars Chorale directed by John Wadell will present "Jazz for Chorus" as the free Forest Theater Sunday Afternoon Program on Aug. 22. This group will be substituting for the organ program originally announced for this date.

The Hidden Valley organization, sponsors of the Hidden Valley Opera Project, the Hidden Valley Orchestra under the direction of Michael Zearott, as well as the chorale, offers intensive instrumental and vocal instruction opportunities for upper high school and early college music students. Theory, practice, technique and public performance are all part of the program. Many Hidden Valley alumnae have gone on to important posts in musical organizations.

The program will be the eighth of nine free civic sponsored programs to be presented this season. The ninth and final concert will be presented Sunday, Aug. 29 and will feature The Watsonville Band in an old-fashioned band concert.

NEW RECORDINGS

RIMSKY-KORSAKOV: TRIO IN C MINOR (Sviatoslav Knushevitzky, cello; David Oistrakh, violin, and Lev Oborin, piano — ABC-Westminster Gold WGM-8321).

This recording, made in the USSR by Melodya, and released here by ABC Records as a production of Kathryn King, seems to be the only recording available at the time of this work. This purely Brahmsian work seems to supersede a recording of this work by the same principals on the now defunct Concert Hall Society, with the difference that the sound is much superior in quality and the surfaces are sonically of a much better quality.

During the course of the first movement, we come upon various facets of Brahms' style: the three-against-two rhythms, the extensions of phrase length, the peculiarly expressive melodic turns of phrase, the characteristic harmonic alterations that intensify repetition; even the Hungarian gypsy sections and the numerous echoes of Schumann fit into the picture.

The second and rather short movement, which is the scherzo, begins with a subject taken from the first movement of Schumann's Piano Concerto, and then introduces a snatch of the Presto of Beethoven's Op. 131 Quartet.

The beautifully lyrical but very brief interludes that are periodically inserted are more restrained. They are distinctly Schumannnesque, and they make use of a flowing canonic treatment of violin and cello which is also employed elsewhere in the work. The third movement is somewhat sweet; there is a beautiful dramatic section for piano solo, however, that gradually adds violin and cello with expressive commentary. The melody of this section is used for a recurrent fugato in the last movement. The recapitulation is an embroidered variant of the original statement. The movement closes with an extension of its slow introduction, with a wandering harmony. The lengthy last movement begins with a slow introduction in which fugal passages for the piano are answered by the cello and then by the violin, which proceeds to take up the fast main theme of the movement. After another statement of the first theme, there is an impassioned setting of the fugal subject that opened the movement. This subject is also used very effectively in the midst of a faster-moving contrapuntal section. There is a conventional recapitulation, including the slow introductory material.

The three names of the performers guarantee that this performance will be in the finest tradition of Russian chamber music playing. The cellist and the pianist may not be as well known to Western audiences as David Oistrakh, the violinist, who, undoubtedly is one of the greatest and most sensitive performers on this instrument. They give to this Trio its highly sentimental lyric quality with fine coloristic shading, and with an emphatic utterance on the rhapsodic Russian folk material present.

By inference, the basic tonality is expressed with vitality, vividness, and powerful eloquence in its various climactic and fugal aspects, thus envisaging a truly classic performance. Though not a major work of the composer's and, indeed, highly derivative of Brahms, Schumann and Mendelssohn, by its skillful manipulation and fine organizational rapport of these three musicians, we achieve a reading that makes it not only interesting and enjoyable, but is a distinct addition to the piano-trio literature.

Within the above limitations, this disc is recommended as an excellent model of typical late nineteenth century use of classical forms, implying ethnic identifiable material.

TCHAIKOVSKY: SYMPHONY NO. 1 IN G MINOR ("WINTER DREAMS") — (USSR STATE Symphony Orchestra conducted by Konstantin Ivanov — ABC-Westminster Gold WGS-8319).

This is also a recording made in the USSR made by Melodya and released here by ABC Records as a production of Kathryn King.

The First Symphony is one of the most representative and complete of the composer's early compositions. Conceived as a lyrical program cycle, it consists of several mood pictures and develops a favorite Russian literary motif — the poetry of winter-clad roads. A single line of lyrical feeling dominates the work. In the first movement, the elegant character of the symphony is established at the outset by the use of flute and bassoon, two octaves apart, with a tremolo background in the violins. The opening melody is of a folk-like nature, revolving around the intervals of the third and fourth. Succeeding phrases grow out of the final notes of the preceding phrase, and the gentle reiterations of the theme suggest the tranquil meditative qualities of the movement's subtitle "Reveries on a Wintry Road."

The following movement, Adagio cantabile, is also programmatically entitled but with a somewhat more cryptic meaning. "Land of Desolation, Land of Mists" is built on a broad-flowing song melody, again of folk-like character. The theme is intensified through contrapuntal embroidery and variation of orchestral color. The Scherzo is an elaboration of that originally written for the C-sharp minor Sonata, Op. Posth. The key is C minor, although there is a hint of vagueness about the tonality. This movement contains many of the whimsical nuances characteristic of the later Scherzos. The middle part of the movement, a waltz theme, is one of the composer's earliest efforts in a genre of which he was passionately fond all of his life. The Finale is prefaced by a slow introduction marked Andante lugubre. Here one of the themes is an actual Russian folk-song: "The Garden Bloomed." It is used as the theme of the introduction and later as the second subject of the Allegro maestoso. The Russian festive finale is a type of concluding movement to which Tchaikovsky returned in all of his symphonies except the Sixth.

Konstantin Ivanov and the USSR State Symphony Orchestra approach this early work of Tchaikovsky, in its four movements, in a distinctly atmospheric and etherealized conception. The sentimentality, particularly of the slow movement, is effectively brought out, but it is kept within the bounds of good taste, and thus, there results a performance that has lyricism, and rhapsodic expressiveness, without being in any way either lachrymose or saccharine in its delineation. The orchestra brings out the various nuances, ranging from gentle grief to wailing despair, with a fine conceptual and attenuated orchestral stylistic evaluation. The richness of the musical thematic content is refreshingly and overtly asserted, without any bombastic and repetitious elements exposed to any extent at all. Thus, by such a reading of this work, we obtain a wonderful integrated melodic statement as contained in the work, with pristine and fresh rhythmic and harmonic evaluation.

The tone quality of the orchestra is vibrantly alive, sensuously suave, and freely exposes its presence without any super sonic high-fidelity. As such, it is recommended as another, and, perhaps, much more viable statement of this early work of Tchaikovsky's tonal pictures.

PROKOFIEV: THE STORY OF A REAL MAN (Soloists, USSR Bolshoi Theatre Chorus and Orchestra conducted by Mark Ermler (ABC-Westminster Gold WGSO 8317-2 (2 discs).

This two-record set of Prokofiev's opera, recorded in the USSR by Melodya, and issued here by ABC Records, as a production of Kathryn King, is in three acts and eleven scenes with a libretto by Myral Mendelssohn (the composer's wife), based on a story by Boris Polevoi. Prokofiev wrote this opera in order to rehabilitate himself with the Soviet authorities in 1948 after a devastating attack on him by the General Committee of the Communist Party.

"In my new opera," the composer explained, "I intend to use trios, duets, and contrapuntally developed choruses for which I will make use of some interesting northern folk songs." The text was also intended to appeal to the Soviet officials, since the central character is a brave Soviet airplane pilot, who, after being shot-down by the Nazis, was obliged to have both his legs amputated, but still insisted on remaining in the service. But this opera failed to restore Prokofiev to the good graces of Soviet bureaucracy.

The opera is the true story of an exemplary "Soviet man," the fighter pilot Alexei Maresyev. It is a strong and powerful theme, which elicited an equally powerful creative musical response from Prokofiev. Emotionally, the opera works on a level far deeper than that of its sociological argument. The aspects of the story which inspired the greatest eloquence in Prokofiev are those which describe the trauma and the decision of Alexei, as well as the more purely descriptive scenes which set the frame for his struggle. The tense declamation of the forest scenes, climaxed by Alexei's poignant encounter with the children and the villagers, and the gradual building up of his resolve in the hospital sequence to the moment when he expresses it in the strong simple tune that is the work's leading motif, are memorable. So are the elegiac trio for the villagers, the beautiful lament of the Nurse in the hospital ward, and the taut, suspenseful narrative of the old Commissar. But this innovative material is associated and combined with a considerable amount of conventional and traditional operatic sequences.

The role of Alexei is taken by one of the Soviet Union's best singers, Evgeni Kibkalo, whose vocal pronunciation is lyrically clear and distinct, and whose melody is fluent and colorful. Rhythmic and harmonic piquancy is another aspect of his dramatic interpretation of this part. His evocation is in the simple, understandable set and stylized formality of the musical structures imposed on composers by the Soviet musical dictums. This is supposed to make it music for the "masses."

The other parts are taken by the various singers involved with a fine emotional response, aid with an effective, rousing vocal line that is reverentially chauvinistic in its involvement with the dogma of the Soviet fatherland.

The Chorus and the Orchestra follow the conductor's lead with absolute precision, and with a brilliant and spacious expansiveness, cognizant at all times that this music in the service of conviction and nationalism, with the psychological implications involved in the traditional conservative manner.

The physical recording is excellent, the tone quality is beautifully sonorous; and this set is highly recommended, not only because it is the only available recording of this work, but because it displays Prokofiev in the unusual atmosphere of conventional operatic form.

THE OBOE: VIVALDI, ALBINONI, BELLINI (Eugene Nepalov, oboe, with the Moscow Chamber Orchestra conducted by Rudolf Barshai — ABC-Westminster Gold WGS-8323).

This recording, made in the USSR by Melodya, and released by ABC Records as another production of Kathryn King, is one of the finest examples of recording technique to date in the Soviet Union. This disc contains the following works: Vivaldi: Concerti for Oboe and String Orchestra, Op. 39 — No. 2, and Op. 8 — No. 9; Albinoni Concerti for Oboe and String Orchestra in D minor, Op. 7 — No. 6, and in B-flat major, Op. 7 — No. 30; and Bellini: Concerto for Oboe and Orchestra in E-flat major.

The A minor Concerto of Vivaldi is typical of the structure of his concerti, its three sections comprising two fast movements separated by a slow Larghetto with its lyrical melody accompanied by the strings. The outer movements contain the usual alternating tutti and solo sections with virtuoso figurations for the oboist. The Op. 8 — No. 9 Vivaldi Concerto in D minor is remarkable for the consistent rhythmic displacement in both the outer movements. Vivaldi's effective use of accents in the weak beats is enviable. The middle Largo, still in the minor key, provides a few moments of lyrical respite between the two driving Allegros with their running bass lines.

The two concerti of Albinoni (Op. 7 — Nos. 3 and 6) display Albinoni's predilection for lighter, more lilting Allegros in contrast to the driving force of Vivaldi's writing. The first movement of No. 3 bears a striking melodic resemblance to the opening movement of Bach's D minor double violin concerto. Here is a strength derived from well-structured counterpoint. Albinoni's adagio movements form the keystone of his concerti. Often longer than either of the two outer movements, these slow sections boast a carefully constructed and ornamented melody with rich orchestral accompaniment, the latter an amenity which Vivaldi, in his haste, frequently omitted altogether. The Adagio from No. 3 is one of the loveliest, with full harmonic string writing to accompany the long melodic phrases of the oboe.

The sprightly third movement is a jig in 6-8 time with a folk-dance quality. A more whimsical mood pervades Op. 7 — No. 6 in which the lively rhythms of the first movement and unexpected syncopations of the third movement surround another poignant Albinoni Adagio. Structurally, this concerto is identical to No. 3.

The Bellini Oboe Concerto in E-flat major, written sometime late in the composer's adolescence, is naively simple and over-hasty in construction, but it is a real bel canto aria for oboe with string accompaniment. Preceded by a few majestic chords from the orchestra, the appealing oboe theme foreshadows Bellini's later melodic skill. The second section is reminiscent of the sudden shifts from lyricism to a lively or dramatic mood common to many Italian operaticarias. Here it takes the form of a polonaise.

Eugene Nepalov, the oboist in these five Baroque concerti, seems to be one of the most proficient masters on this instrument. His tone is rich, warm, and sensuously lyrical. He has a long, unbroken, luxuriant melodic line to his playing. His perfect pitch in its wide tonal range, his exquisite dynamic flow, and his variable brilliant tone quality are attributes that result in a graceful performance containing all the finest factors of the Baroque solo concerto playing. His fresh, pristine execution that is dulcet, and yet, brilliant when essential, is expressive with the most viable and variable nuances of this type of lyrical-dramatic exposition.

The Moscow Chamber Orchestra under Rudolf Barshai is a musical ensemble that has had an outstanding record for a very long time. In its accompaniment, its robustness, impeccability, and sensitivity, give invaluable support to the soloist, thus resulting in a reading that is vibrant, with an open spaciousness. The performances of these oboe concerti are not only magnificent from a musical standpoint, but are most vividly ingratiating.

The tone quality is exquisite in its sonority and luxuriance of sound. This disc is most highly recommended as an example of the finest oboe playing within the framework of an unusually qualified orchestral group.

Marching band to open festival

The Olympia Brass Band, marching jazz band from New Orleans, has been signed by the Monterey Jazz Festival and will appear on each of its five shows, scheduled for Sept. 17, 18, 19.

Jimmy Lyons, festival general manager, said that to open each show the 14-member old-time Dixieland band will march across the grassy, oak-studded festival grounds, through the audience in the 7000-seat outdoor arena and wind up on the stage at the Monterey County Fairgrounds.

The Olympia Brass Band, founded in 1960 by Harold DeJan, has played for festivals, Mardi Gras parades and traditional New Orleans Jazz funerals. It has toured in Europe and throughout the United States. The group of uniformed jazz players is led in its marching by a grand marshall in tuxedo carrying a flowered umbrella.

Members of the band are: Allan Jaffee, tuba; George Shier Colar, Edmund Foucher, Milton Batiste and Andrew Anderson, trumpets; Emanuel Paul and Harold DeJan, saxophones; Andred Jefferson, snare drums, Nowell Glass, bass drum; Paul Crawford and Gerald Joseph, trombones. DeJan is leader, Batiste is assistant leader. Grand marshalls are Mathew Houston, Henry Glass and Anderson Minor.

The Friday evening concert will feature a big band retrospective with the music of Fletcher Henderson, Jimmy Lunceford and the mid-forties BeBop Band of Dizzy Gillespie, all recreated by artists named above. Also featured on the Friday evening concert will be a tribute to the late Louis Armstrong.

The Monterey Jazz Festival will consist of five separately programmed concerts — Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings and Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Additional artists will be announced shortly.

Tickets are available at major box offices. For information write the Monterey Jazz Festival, P.O. Box JAZZ, Monterey, California 93940. Telephone (408) 373-3366.

Hu exhibit scheduled

The Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel will present a showing of the paintings of Hu Chi Chung, beginning Aug. 21 with an invitational cocktail party at which the artist will be present. He will also be in the gallery on Sunday, Aug. 22 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Zantman's has offered an exhibit of Hu Chi Chung each year since the artist came to this country from Taiwan, about five years ago. Coming from the Chinese mainland to Taiwan, the young Hu studies the classic schools of art, and from there developed his individual style, which established him as one of Taiwan's leading artists. His paintings have been included in many international exhibits.

California folk taking over the spotlight. Now if only the festival board could see clear to the jazz top-selling album charts and invite a few California folk like Herbie Hancock and Miroslav Vitous to the festivities. This year's selection of the Matrix band as a tip-of-the-hat to contemporary jazz is a major disappointment for the younger ticket holders who will be called upon more and more to buy those tickets in the future.

Regulars of the Cannery Row Dinner Theatre audience will be missing Alan Robb's presence at future productions. Alan, who has handled every phase of Row presentations from acting to directing, has left the company on an amiable basis and plans to stage a show in Mexico before returning to the Peninsula in late fall to help the new theatre on the Wharf get underway.

The best scene to dance on the Peninsula this week? It has to be the Boiler Room where the area's top rock group — California — will be performing Thursday, Friday and Saturday while Bare Hyde will sit in for the guys on Saturday eve while California takes care of a previous commitment.

California's music is definitely a notch or two above that of the average rock unit. Many of their members have been spotted playing at various jazz jams throughout the Peninsula. The group emphasizes their own music spiced with tasty horn stretches of the musical imagination and a consistent beat that shows the concept of "disco music" to be the pallid imitation of pure rock that it is.

Catch California at the Boiler Room this weekend — they're good!

The Studio Theatre's current production of "The Boyfriend" is the catalyst for the continuance of theatrical tradition within the Strauch family of Carmel.

Stacy Strauch is currently playing "Maisie" in the Studio adaptation. Sixteen years ago, her mother Jane played the French maid in a production of the musical and fifteen years ago sister Val was "Nancy" in a school performance. How's that for coincidence?

Like to know what the top rated radio stations are in town? So would the local radio management. Once again Hooper and ARB have come out with ratings that do not sync in any way. Let's face it. Those heavyweights in the ratings business back east have little time to waste on a small market like ours. Thus, the disparity in the figures.

The only reason the surveys are taken at all is to make it easy for the Madison Avenue crowd to buy time for national spots without ever leaving their air-conditioned offices. Three sheets for scientific methodology and look over those ratings with a fine tooth comb if you're a businessman approached by a radio ad rep. I'll try to translate the numbers to English by next week.

I trust that Carmel Mayor Gene Hammond will give as much effort to saving the Village Corner as he did to the Examiner reporters who converted his anti-tourists statements into a front page story last Sunday in the Ex-Chron.

I'm not terribly happy about the 12,500 cars that passed through an intersection of town in one day either but isn't it strange that His Honor failed to bring up the council's constant approval of new business buildings for the area? It seems logical that the more stores that are opened in Carmel, the more potential shoppers will come to town. Meanwhile, I'm happy to report that I'm still able to buy my clothing at available stores throughout the Peninsula and like many other Carmel residents do not need another cloth emporium to replace my morning breakfast spot.

Let's face it — losing the Village Corner would be a disgrace that should be retaliated with citizen ire at the next council election. We'll be watching your vote on this one, gentlemen.

NEWS FLASH: LOOK FOR THE MONTEREY JAZZ FESTIVAL TO FORMALLY ANNOUNCE THE SIGNING OF A LOCAL JAZZ TRIO FOR ITS SUNDAY AFTERNOON LINEUP.

This is the shot in the arm that the local jazz scene has needed for quite a while. Although I won't mention names until the ink is dry on the contracts, suffice to say these Peninsula residents will stir a touch of pride in those of us planning to attend the festival next month.

That Sunday afternoon session will spotlight the All-California-High-School Jazz Band. It's good to see more

School registration dates announced

Middle School Registration

Program cards, locker assignments and school maps, for students attending Carmel Middle School in the fall, will be available in the cafeteria from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. on Aug. 30 and 31. New students to the Carmel Unified School District in grades 6, 7 or 8 can call Carmel Middle School at 624-2785 for registration information and an appointment with a counselor.

Carmel High School Registration

Carmel High School will register students for fall classes on Aug. 30, 31 and Sept. 1. A schedule based on a system of rotation is listed below. This system applies to everyone with the exception of students who have not paid overdue fees, fines or returned books. These students must wait until 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 31 to register, unless they bring the materials or money to registration.

If a student cannot register at the assigned time, a friend or parent with the appropriate materials may register for the

Enrollment drops

Enrollment in the Carmel Unified School District is predicted to drop 40 students for the 1976-77 year, but according to assistant superintendent Dr. Robert Whitehead, the number of students will stay about the same in the next few years with enrollment leveling off. Total enrollment is expected to be 3,100 students.

Elementary schools in the district will remain much the same, dropping a total of 10 students. The big change will be at the junior high and high school level.

Carmel High School is anticipated to increase enrollment by 58 students and Middle School will drop 92 students. The reason? According to Dr. Whitehead, CMS graduated the largest class in the history of the district last June. Three hundred and fourteen students comprised the eighth grade class of 1976. While the high school welcomes the largest class this fall, the Middle School will be accepting a rather small sixth grade class.

Carmel High has been overcrowded for the past five years and this additional freshmen group is the "last straw." To temporarily solve this problem the school district has ordered two relocatable classes that are near completion.

The classrooms, actually one building partitioned into two, will be placed behind the crafts shop. The portables are similar to those being used by the high school Continuation School and Regional Occupation Program. Wood paneled, fully carpeted, heated and air conditioned, the rooms will be the most modern on campus.

Enrollment at the high school is expected to be 1190 students for the upcoming year; Middle School, 715; River School, 396; Tularcitos, 377; Carmelo, 176; Woods, 150; Captain Cooper, 75; and Continuation School, 30.

student at the assigned time. New students and students who have not received their registration material can pick up the required packets at the Carmel High front desk. New students to the area should also make an appointment with a counselor.

Girls' budget increased

The girls athletic department at Carmel High has received an additional $3,000 for the 1976-77 budget. The increase was made in compliance with Title IX of the Education Amendments which prohibits sexual discrimination in educational programs that receive federal funds.

This move was made in an attempt to bring the CHS girls program up to par with the boys sports. Says Carmel High athletic director Dick Lawitz, "Primarily in this situation Title IX is aimed at allowing girls to get equal representation with the boys sports."

Most of the $3,000 will be used to finance additional coaching positions.

certain countries, cultures and peoples, with the combined effort of the English and social science departments. The course is taught two periods daily by Joe Feldeison and Frank Lynch.

Three teachers are involved with "Project: Community," a course that deals with various aspects of community life. Also offered in a two-period block, the course brings together the social science, English and productive arts departments.

The English department has three new additions for this fall. "Individualized English," "English Honors" and "English As A Second Language" will be added to the list of classes.

"Individualized English," taught by Frank Lynch, is designed to cover five areas at the students' pace: writing, reading, grammar, vocabulary and in-class games. The course will be on a contractual basis with the goals established by the students and parents.

"English Honors," a course for freshmen in the Mentally Gifted Minors program, will cover composition writing, literature, and vocabulary, with a strong emphasis on the mechanics of the English language. Buzz Rainer will instruct.

Limited to students who are learning to speak, read and write the English language, "English As A Second Language" is a one year or longer course, depending upon the individual student's needs. The course meets one semester of the high school English graduation requirements.

"AP United States History" is part of the new Advanced Placement courses at Carmel High. Courses in the AP program emphasize studies that will be helpful in obtaining advanced standings in college and preparing for the Scholastic Aptitude Test. Ray Stumbo will teach this class covering American history from the colonial period to the present.

4 teachers hired

When school starts, on Tuesday Sept. 7, students in the Carmel Unified School District will notice some new faces. This year the CUSD hired four teachers and one administrator to fill openings left by resigned or retired teachers and to fill new job positions. Another opening, that of business education teacher at Carmel High School, has still not been filled, but will be before school begins.

According to assistant superintendent of the school district, Dr. Robert Whitehead, this year's employment number is much lower than previous year's. "We are hiring fewer teachers now than we have in the past. Some years we would hire between 15 and 20 new teachers and administrators. But now that enrollment has leveled off one job longer there are not as many openings."

In her first year of teaching Margo McBane will begin her career as a social science teacher at Carmel High School. Ms. McBane received her bachelor of arts degree at the University of Santa Cruz and her master's at Stanford University. She has previously done work as a student teacher at both Palo Alto and Sunnyvale high schools. Margo will serve as a replacement teacher for Marcia Green, presently on leave of absence, instructing classes in Western Cultures and U.S. History.

Carmel High will also have a new mathematics teacher, John Durein. Durein, of Sunnyvale, taught for five years at Piedmont Hills High School in San Jose. There he taught classes in geometry, Continued on page 23

Buses will be available to bring students to Carmel High School for registration. On Aug. 30, 31 and Sept. 1 a bus will leave Tularcitos School at 8 a.m. and at 12:30 p.m. making all customary stops. The bus will return students, leaving CHS at noon and at 4 p.m. daily. On Monday, Aug. 30 a bus will leave from the south end of Big Sur at 11:45 a.m., making all usual stops, and will return at 4 p.m.

Carmel River School Registration

New students to the area who plan on attending Carmel River Elementary School in the fall should contact the school office before classes begin on Sept. 7. The office is open between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. and a verification of birth date should be brought.

Carmelo Registration

A packet of general information for all parents of Carmelo students will be delivered during the last week in August. The packet will contain all needed information on class assignments, rules of the school and arrival and dismissal times. The material will also be available at the school office, if needed.

New students to the area should register and receive their information packets at the office after Aug. 23. The office is open from 8:30 a.m.

Tularcitos Registration

New students wishing to register for the 1976-77 school year at Tularcitos Elementary School should contact the school office starting Aug. 16. The office will be open from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Parents of children already registered or those who attended Tularcitos last year will receive a "Parent's Packet" with all necessary information, delivered to their home, the last week in August.

Carmel Woods Registration

Proof of birthdate, inoculation records and previous school records should be brought to the school office at Carmel Woods Elementary as necessary information to register a new student. The office will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. after Monday, Aug. 23.

Carmel Adult School Registration

The Carmel Adult School will begin its program of day and evening classes on Monday, Sept. 13. The CAS will be offering over 70 classes in 13 different locations in the Carmel school district. Classes follow the district adopted school calendar and meet in two and three hour time blocks, once or twice a week.

A list of courses will be announced later in August and students may register at their first class meeting. Tuition fee is $5 per course per semester for high school graduates 21 and over. Current high school students and those over 62 will not be charged.

Last fall's schedule included courses in the fine arts, crafts, foreign languages, homemaking education, industrial arts, literature, music, social studies and various recreational activities. For more information contact the Carmel Adult School, 624-1714.

Kindergarten Screening Dates

A developmental screening will be conducted during the week of Aug. 23 through Aug. 27 for all children entering Kindergarten in the Carmel Unified School District. Dr. Richard Hawkins, director of pupil personal services and coordinator of the program has announced the following schedule for the screening:

Monday, Aug. 23, Woods School, 8:30 a.m. to noon, in the Library.

Tuesday, Aug. 24, Captain Cooper, 8:30 a.m. to noon, in the Kindergarten Room.

Wednesday, Aug. 25, River School, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., in the Library.

Thursday, Aug. 26, Tularcitos, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., in the Kindergarten-First Building.

Friday, Aug. 27, Carmelo, 8:30 a.m. to noon, in the Alpha Wing.

Those who have previously registered their children should have an appointment and will receive a reminder in the mail. Anyone planning to enroll a child in Kindergarten this fall, in any Carmel School, who has not yet registered their child or received a letter of appointment for the screening, is asked to contact school on Aug. 23 or call this week at 624-1546. If you cannot attend the screening on the day set for your school, your child may be screened at another school providing you have made an appointment. Since parents will be involved in the process, it is important that you bring your child and plan to stay for about one hour.

Dr. Hawkins said that the purpose of the screening is to observe the child's general development and construct an initial learning profile. This will be used by the Kindergarten teacher to plan an individualized program. During the screening, the child will be asked to do a number of game-like tasks while a trained observer notes levels of development. Areas covered by the screening include: large muscle coordination, eye-hand coordination, visual perception, visual memory, auditory perception, auditory memory, receiving language, expressing language and speech. The screening staff includes the Kindergarten teacher, the school principal, the district psychologist, speech therapist and learning assistance teachers.

When a child is involved, the parent will have an opportunity to talk with the school principal who will be present to provide information, and for discussion. Following the screening, the parent and teacher will review the profile and discuss the findings.

New programs set at Carmel High

For the 1976-77 academic year Carmel High School will initiate a program of higher level instruction for interested and qualified students. Honors and advanced placement courses will be offered, as well as the Mentally Gifted Minors program which is in its second year at CHS.

IX courses have been identified as "Honors" subjects: Honors English open to MGM students in grade nine; Modern Europe, grade 11, 12; Anatomy and Physiology, grade 11, 12; Five Cities, grade 11, 12; Leadership, limited to student body and class officers; and British Literature, grades 11, 12.

These classes offer a more indepth study program than regular subjects and are designed to prepare the student for both the college entrance examinations and college level work. Completed honors courses are also taken into consideration by many of the colleges and universities when applying for admission.

Also available to Carmel High students will be four advanced placement classes: AP U.S. History, AP Calculus, AP French Literature and Language, and AP Spanish Literature.

These classes emphasize studies that prepare for the Advanced Placement Test. Passing of the APT gives college credit and advanced standing in a specific subject at all branches of the University of California and most other major colleges and universities.

AP subjects are open mainly to the eleventh and twelfth graders because of the stiff course prerequisites. Both AP French and Spanish Literature require three years of high school Foreign Language with a "B" average or two years with an "A" average. A minimum "C" grade in Trig-Analysis is mandatory for AP Calculus, and U.S. History is open only to juniors and seniors.

Students involved in the Mentally Gifted Minors are encouraged to register for an AP or honors course. The MGM program, headed by assistant principal Paul Scheckler, is open to students identified as a mentally gifted minor. The purpose of MGM is to provide a viable and challenging program for the gifted students.

Last year activities were arranged for noon time and after school. The schedule included attending the films, "Luther" and "The Three Sisters," lectures on astronomy, bridge and other subjects, and a trip to the planetarium at Golden Gate Park in San Francisco. Similar educational activities are being scheduled for this year along with the new higher level courses, to match the student's learning needs and interests.

The Mentally Gifted Minors program is partially funded by the State Department of Education. Students qualify for MGM by an examination given each year.

ECE comes to Tularcitos

By JULIE ZOELLIN

Tularcitos Elementary School will be initiating an Early Childhood Education (ECE) program this fall for students in Kindergarten through the third grade. The program is an expansion of the ECE at Carmel River School which went into effect two years ago.

"The main strength of this program is the involvement of the community and parents as well as the staff," commented Tularcitos Principal Phillip Smith. Smith, nine K-3 teachers and nine parents worked for two months in the spring of 1975 to establish a proposal that would improve the education of the youngsters.

The proposal involved eight instructional and supportive components. Reading, mathematics, language, multicultural education, staff development, parent education, parent participation and health and auxiliary-service were categories worked on by the committee.

Chairperson for the ECE committee, and a parent of an elementary school student, is Mrs. Diane Garneau. Mrs. Garneau and the other members of the volunteer staff evaluated the present early education program at Tularcitos and set objectives for a stronger, more effective, system.

The ECE plan is state funded and each school district coordinates a master plan for the elementary level. The Carmel District Advisory Committee scheduled River School to first initiate the ECE. Carmelo and Woods School will also use the program later on.

The Tularcitos proposal was approved by the State Board of Education before the 1975-76 school year, but budget cuts in many districts cancelled the funds and the Tularcitos ECE was postponed.

Funds were allocated for the program last July and it will now go into effect for the 1976-77 year. Among other innovations, the money will be spent on better materials and record systems that can keep track of the individual student's progress throughout elementary school. These record systems will provide an effective method for the teachers to detect any deficiencies in the child's education. Teacher aides will also be hired through state funds.

"We want the best educational program possible for the children," Smith stated, "but with our past methods we weren't going to have it. Now with ECE funds we can maintain a one to ten ratio of children and teachers for reading, mathematics and language. There will be a noticeable difference."

Staff for the project will include an ECE coordinator, an ECE secretary and the nine teacher aides. Theresa Brodsky will be the new coordinator, assisting the teachers and synchronizing the written proposal with the classroom activities.

The Tularcitos ECE will be monitored and reviewed by the State Board of Education throughout the year. A rating will be given based on fiscal reports, records, instruction, meeting the set objectives and other items.

Many proposals from other districts were read by the committee to give them an idea of what other schools are doing with elementary education. Washington Elementary School, in Corral De Tierra, received an exceptionally high rating.

"The main purpose of the Early Childhood Education program is to build a system that will meet the individual children's needs on a one-to-one basis with the staff," Smith, overseer of the project, concluded, "and to involve the parents and the community in the education of the youngsters."

Pre-school programs shift Valley sites

There will be three new locations for the parent cooperative nurseries in the Carmel Unified School. The schools, Bay School, Valley and Mid-Valley, have all been relocated to conform with the state's earthquake safety code.

The Bay School will return this year to its original location on Highway 1 after a two-year stay at Carmel Woods Elementary School. The pre-schoolers, however, will greet an all new schoolhouse, just recently completed.

The Valley parent nursery is moving from the Community Chapel to vacant rooms at Tularcitos School and the Mid-Valley nursery will open this fall at Carmelo School, leaving behind St. Phillips Lutheran Church.

The nursery schools, headed by Wendy Banks (Bay School), Barbara Novelli (Mid-Valley) and Illia Thompson (Valley), are a cooperative program involving the parents and their children, ages three to five.

To enroll children in the school the parents must make a commitment to work one day a week with the children as well as attend a three-hour class in "Homemaking Education" at the Carmel Adult School once a week. Only one parent is required to participate, but both may share in the schedule.

algebra, trigonometry, computer programming and consumer mathematics. Among his other courses in math survey and geometry at CHS, he will also teach calculus, offered for the first time at Carmel High. Durein received his B.S. from UC Berkeley and his master's at San Jose State.

The new business education teacher, yet to be hired, will be replacing Miss Wendy Stiles. The duties will include courses in typing, shorthand, bookkeeping, consumer education and office practice.

Also new to the staff at Carmel High, but not in the district, is Chad Lincoln who transferred from Carmel Middle School where he taught in the language arts department. At CHS he will be teaching English I and World Cultures as well as assisting Jack Ellena with the freshmen football squad.

Carmel River School will have two new employees, Ms. Mary Ann George and Ms. Marilyn Kodani. Ms. George, of Pacific Grove, received her degree from Northern Arizona University and has taught in elementary schools in Salinas, Pacific Grove and Oahu, Hawaii. She will be teaching first grade at River School.

Ms. Kodani will also be teaching the first grade at River School. She is originally from Carmel and attended both CHS and Monterey Peninsula College before leaving the area in 1968. She attended UC Irvine, UC Los Angeles and San Jose State College and taught for four years in the Pasadena Unified School District.

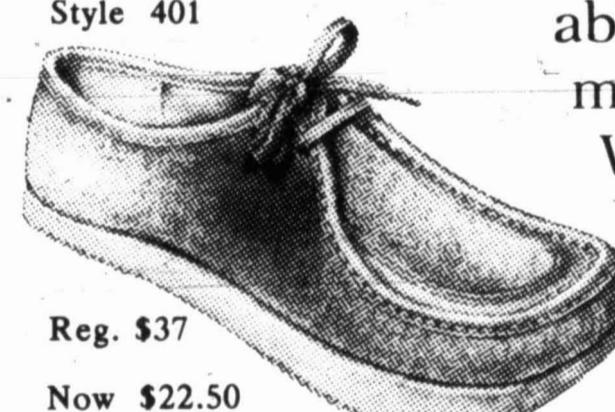

Two jobs have been assigned to the new administrator in the district, Charles L. Phillips. He is now coordinator of both the vocational education programs and the Regional Occupational Program in Carmel. Phillips attended Monterey Peninsula College, Cal State San Francisco and the University of Southern California where he obtained his master's degree. He also spent four years at UCLA studying in a doctoral program.

MPC program

Medical assisting changes

The medical assisting program at Monterey Peninsula College is undergoing changes starting this fall semester which will allow greater numbers of students to participate. The program also has a new instructor-coordinator.

For the last 12 years, completion of the medical assisting program took one year. Now the program has been expanded to a two year period and in addition to clinical procedures students will receive training in the area of front office procedures.

Heading up the expanded program is Ms. Ina Yenerich, who comes to MPC from William Rainey Harper College in Palatine, Ill., where she served as the instructor-coordinator of a medical assisting program. She is replacing Ms. Margaret Horsburgh who started the MPC program in 1964 and announced her retirement last year. Prior to her teaching at William Rainey Harper College, Ms. Yenerich worked for 17 years as a medical assistant and office manager in a hospital setting and in a private practice.

She said that MPC's new program format will give students a better background in front office procedure work which includes dealing with insurance papers, bookkeeping, appointment scheduling, etc. "All this is in addition to the medical assistant's other duties which are to assist the doctor with patient examinations and medical treatments," said Ms. Yenerich.

She explained that the program changes come as a result of recommendations from an outside consultant who worked with the college last year and from a community advisory committee made up of local physicians and medical assistants.

The two-year program has openings for 50 students this fall. Students must pass an English proficiency examination and be able to type at least 45 words per minute. Classes being offered this fall include medical ethics, law and professional relations, medical terminology and medical office clinical techniques.

Upon completion of the program, students will receive an Associate in Science degree and will also be eligible to take the certification examination.

CMS activities set

Carmel Middle School will be offering after-school and before-school activities for all interested students this year.

An early morning elective period will be available to students who wish to take an additional elective course, starting at 8 a.m. Two new classes have been added this year to the list of 20 electives, drafting and guitar. Teachers will also be on hand at 8 a.m. daily to help tutor students in every department.

Other morning co-curricular activities include the Stamp Club, Coin Club, Yearbook Committee, and quiet study periods.

From 3:30 to 4:45 p.m. boys and girls may participate in the CMS after-school sports program. Boys activities will include flag football, soccer, basketball, wrestling and track. Girls activities will include basketball, volleyball, gymnastics, softball and track. Tennis, golf and cross country are still tentative for both programs.

Middle School is a member of the Peninsula Junior High School Athletic League which involves interschool competition between seventh and eighth graders. Girls and boys on the sixth grade level participate in intramural sports.

ANITA SILVER is the new principal at Carmel.

Carmel has new principal

By JULIE ZOELLIN

"All of this is new. New people, new teachers, new parents and a new community. Every minute has been exciting," says Mrs.

Anita Silver, the new principal of Carmel Elementary School.

Anita, former teacher and vice-principal of Tularcitos Elementary, has taken over the responsibilities of Tom Williams who has returned to teaching at Carmel Middle School.

The mother of a three-month-old boy, Daniel Aaron, Anita will work as a half-time administrator, four hours a day, "I feel the teachers and the community will be getting more for the time available," she comments, "I'm very happy being a mother and having a job." Williams, the former principal, worked as a full-time teacher as well as the added administrative duties.

Mrs. Silver is originally from Toledo, Ohio where her family, "devote mid-westerners," still live. She attended both grammar school and high school in Ohio and graduated with a double major in Russian studies and sociology from the University of Michigan in 1963.

She also studied social psychology in the graduate program at UOM, but left for the west coast to work in television advertising before completing her studies. "It was either New York or San Francisco, and San Francisco is more my size," she said.

Working in various tutorial projects, Mrs. Silver has been involved with child development much of her life. She has taught elementary school in Soledad and San Bruno and has done substitute work. She received her master's degree in E.H., working with the educationally handicapped, at San Francisco State where she also earned her lifetime teaching credentials.

Mrs. Silver moved to Carmel in 1971 after she married Richard Silver of Carmel, a local attorney. They presently reside in the Highlands.

Principal Silver will be working on the Early Childhood Education program this year in addition to her other activities. The project, which hopefully will go into effect for the 1977-78 school year, will create a lot more community involvement according to Mrs. Silver.

Another change is the Mid-Valley Parent Cooperative Nursery now being housed at Carmel. The pre-schoolers will have their own play area separate from the elementary facilities.

She enjoys music, traveling, macrame and needlepoint, but spends most of her time with the new baby, the Silver's first child. "Although during the school year I won't be with the baby all the time, I think it will make me a better mother and I'm sure it will work out. I'm really looking forward to this whole experience and the community and the new faculty."

Football to start

By ART BLACK, JR.

Football is in the wings in Carmel, and will come to center stage next Monday, Aug. 23, as the Carmel High Padres begin official pre-season practice.

Equipment issue will take place on Saturday, Aug. 21 for the varsity and junior varsity players. The varsity will receive equipment in the morning from 9 to noon, and the junior varsity players will draw their gear Saturday afternoon from 1 until 5 p.m.

According to Padre Head Coach Jason Harbert, no physical examinations will be offered this fall by the school district, since all athletes were to have pre-season physicals last June. Harbert stressed that if potential football players didn't have a school-offered physical last June, they must have a physical by their own doctor before beginning practice on Monday.

The season will kick off this year with the traditional Red-Gray Game, an intersquad scrimmage slated for Saturday, Sept. 11. Pre-league games scheduled for this year include Watsonville (there) on Friday, Sept. 17, Seaside (here) on Saturday, Sept. 25, and Live Oak in Morgan Hill on Friday, Oct. 1. The Mission Trails Athletic League opener is slated with Palma High School in Salinas on Friday night, Oct. 8, followed by King City (here) on Saturday, Oct. 16.

Coach Harbert has arranged a non-league contest with Camden High School from the San Jose area to be played on Carmel's Bardarson Field on Saturday, Oct. 23. MTAL play resumes against Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach on Saturday, Oct. 30. Since RLS has no junior varsity team, the Padre JVs will trek to Hollister to pick up a non-league game on the 30th.

The Padres will take on Gonzales in Spartan Stadium in south county on Friday evening, Nov. 5, and will host Hollister High School the following Saturday, Nov. 13. The league finale will be against traditional arch-foe Pacific Grove Breakers on the home gridiron on Saturday, Nov. 20.

MPC sets workshops

Monterey Peninsula College Community Services will offer nine workshops and short courses during the fall semester starting in September.

They range from Monterey County archaeology to Cantonese cooking and run from four to nine weeks. All the workshops are self-supporting and fees are required.

The workshops and courses include:

Afro-Haitian dance, an eight-week course taught by Gaye Bennett, will be held Wednesdays from 8 to 9 p.m., starting Sept. 1. The registration fee is $10.

A course in woodfinishing will be given by Ruel Vincent on Tuesdays, starting Sept. 7 or Oct. 19 and running six weeks. Hours are 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The registration fee is $8.

The martial art of Aikido will be conducted for four weeks by Danielle Molles on Wednesdays from 7 to 8:30 p.m. beginning Sept. 8 and from 10:30 a.m. to noon starting Oct. 2. The registration fee is $10.

A five-week workshop on the antique clock will be presented by Harold Lawrence on Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning Sept. 13. Registration fee is $8.

Instruction in the art of baking bread will be given by Francis Kalnay on Mondays, starting Sept. 13, or Tuesdays, Sept. 14, from 7 to 9:30 p.m. The registration fee for the six-week course is $10.

Lise Winge will be the instructor in a workshop on Cantonese cooking which will be held Mondays, starting Sept. 20, or Tuesdays, starting Sept. 21, from 7 to 9:30 p.m. The five-week course has a registration fee of $15.

The archaeology of Monterey County will be conducted by Donald Howard on Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. starting Sept. 23. Registration fee for the eight-week course is $10.

A nine-week course in silk screen will be presented by Barbara Williams on Saturdays, from 10 a.m. to noon, starting Sept. 25. The registration fee is $14.

A course in creative problem solving will be conducted by William Sigmund for six weeks on Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m. starting Sept. 30. The registration fee is $8.

Enrollment must be completed before the classes begin. Students are encouraged to register early as classes close quickly.

Registration may be made in person at the MPC Community Services Office on campus from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Phone inquiries may be made by calling the Community Services office at 373-5522.

CHS to offer...

Howard Sanborn will teach the one year Biology 2 honors course, "Anatomy and Physiology." Biology 1 is the prerequisite for this rigorous systems approach to anatomy and physiology. The course will prepare students for medical, paramedical, physical education and other fields in which the knowledge of embryology, the skeletal system and the respiratory functions among many, are a basic necessity.

The French division of the foreign languages department at Carmel High will be adding two advanced French classes this semester. "Advanced French Conversation" requires two years of high school French, a willingness to speak French at all times during the instruction and teacher approval. A one semester course, the class will cover the practical side of learning French and field trips will present the true-to-life situations that may arise when speaking a foreign language.

"AP French Literature and Language" is a one year course with three years of high school French mandatory. It is specifically designed to challenge advanced students in French, the linguistically gifted and Mentally Gifted Minors. The course will be built around the study of five novels and five plays.

The physical education department will also offer a new class, "Wilderness Exploration." Emphasis will be placed on wilderness enjoyment and survival. Hiking, climbing and camping techniques will be covered, as well as first aid and plant biology. One or more evening and weekend sessions will also be held by the instructor, Robert Brooks.

All courses, including the 12 new additions, are tentative offerings for the 1976-77 school year. Only those courses which gain sufficient enrollment during the late-August registration will actually be part of the school program.

Plans for a Belgian meal

When my friend the Germaine of Carmel returned from a much feted visit to her native Brussels we met at The Red Lion, our usual rendezvous, to discuss her happy eating over there. Breakfast is patterned after the French with rounds called pistolets similar to croissants, sweet butter, strawberry confiture and chicory infiltrated café with hot milk.

And in Belgium the main meal of the day is from noon until three, the morning is for walking to prepare for a hearty meal. There are many shops featuring Brussels lace made in floral designs with small bobbins the same today as some hundred years ago. Combined with super fine linens in delicate rainbow colors these are exquisite. There is also the open air market that opened at dawn since it was so hot this summer everything would have wilted if kept waiting.

Some of Germain's favorite Belgian dishes that she cooks here in Carmel are: Le Waterzoie (Chicken Soup). There are two kinds of waterzoie, chicken and fish. Both are very popular throughout Belgium whose cuisine is a combination of French, Flemish and Dutch. Take a whole cleaned chicken or a defrosted one, and rub it inside and out with lemon. Put in saucepan with sufficient water to half cover it. Bring to a boil, skim and add a peeled onion stuck with cloves, shredded celery and leeks, minced parsley, thyme, 1 crushed bayleaf, a sliced pared carrot, previously sautéed in butter, salt and pepper to taste. Add a bottle of dry white wine, cover chicken pot and simmer until poult is very tender then slice it and serve in tureen with stock included. Garnish with the vegetables adding one Tbsp. breadcrumbs. Serving piping hot.

What a wholesome beginning as all Flemish food is such as the following: Les Carbonnades Flamandes. The word carbonnades originally meant grilling over coals but later came to mean slow simmering. Melt 4 Tbps. butter in heavy casserole adding 6 sliced peeled onions. Sauté until goldish. Remove and save. Brown 4 lbs. sliced best beef, when possible, then sprinkle with flour plus pan juices until a smooth roux has formed. Combine, adding beer, mild vinegar salt and pepper, sugar to taste. Cover and cook 2 hours or until meat is really tender.

Serve with a crisp salade of endive. While in Belgium these beautiful white hearts are so easily served forth. Just rinse them, removing the outer leaves to save for "lettus or soup cooking." Wash and dry briefly. Eat out of hand with only salt to taste, simply delicious. You can do this with Carmel young hearts of butter lettuce, not quite the same thing but so what. Is anything?

Our overseas friends seem to enjoy such everyday items as tomato, lettuce and bacon sandwiches. Less expensive as Germaine's young Belgian professors found out. They came on a Greyhound tour of the U.S.A. and this was their favorite. Can you imagine leaving Brussels to find these two erudites ravished for sprouts? Naturally they were Brussel ones, hand picked up on our coast line where the fog is right.

We like these little things, outer skins removed, thoroughly rinsed, then only salt for each bouche. Everything is so tender and fresh when young unless something extra gets in there first.

As for desserts. Our Germaine, how she loves them, but is so sensible that one follows the plan of cheese and fruit instead of whipped cream etc. and, ah, all those extra pounds.

In Belgium where they must live right today, cafe is as usual an aurore gesture. Maybe a touch of cognac within. That would certainly be easy. But we have Germaine's Mousse au Chocolat, light and fluffy. The combination is 2 Tbps. instant coffee, some sweet chocolate. Combine in double boiler until chocolate is quite melted. Remove and allow to cool. Add 4 egg yolks, until lightly colored. Add 1 cup sugar with beaten whites carefully into chocolate mixture. Chill in large or individual molds. Really good as my visitors from Washington, D.C. certified today because I have just gone out to the kitchen refrigerator and none is left. Proof of a good provider.

Extra dividend taken from Gaston Clement's Le Conseiller Culinaire, Belgian chef par excellence, Rognons de Veau, veal kidneys sautéed in butter, then cover with madiera and simmer gently. Serve over dry white rice.

All of this is due to Germaine's visit in Belgium when King Baudouin's celebration of his 25th tenure with his Spanish born Queen Astrid took place.

GOODWILL TO GIVE DISCOUNT

Goodwill truck drivers will leave donors a special coupon for a 10 per cent discount off the regular prices of wardrobe items as they pick up contributions during the month of August. The coupons will also be dispensed by clerks when items are taken directly to a Goodwill thrift shop. The discount is part of a "Fall Fashion Fling" program, aimed at demonstrating to the public how its donations are turned into dollars that provide vocational rehabilitation for handicapped people. Goodwill stores are the major source of income for supporting the nonprofit organization's activities. Donations to Goodwill are tax deductible. For more information, telephone 394-1212 or visit the Goodwill store at 729 Broadway in Seaside.

OLD CARMEL

An author's party to be held Aug. 27, 5 to 7 p.m., at the Village Corner will serve as the kick-off for a civic-minded group calling itself "Old Carmel." Randy Reinstedt will be signing copies of his new book, "Tales, Treasures and Pirates of Old Monterey," as the newly-formed Old Carmel group enlists new members. Old Carmel has been described as "a vehicle to combat forces which threaten the beauty, charm and livability of Carmel." Concerned about the possible demise of the Village Corner restaurant, Old Carmel aims at preserving some of Carmel's "amenities" and heritage.

TRUST DEPT. MOVES

Council grants 3 % pay hike; employee groups not happy

Having reached an impasse after one of the longest series of negotiating sessions in Carmel history, the City Council decided to grant municipal employees a three per cent salary increase for the 1976-77 fiscal year, but over one-fourth of the city workers will not even get that.

At Tuesday night's special council meeting, the council made public its reclassification system for Carmel's 63 employees. Under the new system, 17 employees are considered "over range," thus making them ineligible for any step or across-the-board increases this year.

Also announced was a new medical plan for city employees which makes some reduction in benefits. Carmel will switch from its experimental self-insured plan to a policy with a commercial insurance company.

But the City Council's decisions were made without the agreement of three groups of city employees — miscellaneous, police and department heads.

"We were unable to reach a memorandum of understanding with any of the employee associations," city attorney George Brehmer, the council's negotiator, announced.

Because of unwavering differences of opinion, Brehmer explained, the council had to adopt its salary, classification and benefit resolutions without the assent of the employees, but "as it deems appropriate in its best judgement."

Brehmer briefly described the schedule of negotiations which, he said, began in March, but Carmel City Employees' Association president Chuck August got up to say "things've gone somewhat awry."

August denied that the association had been "dragging its feet," and complained of not having been given information on cost of living proposals, reclassification and medical plans in sufficient time to come to an agreement within his own organization.

Carmel Police Department Employees' Association president Don Fusilier also stressed that, in his view, negotiations were not at an impasse. Although August objected to the pay raise and reclassification system he was most critical of the way the council had handled the health benefits. Fusilier, on the other hand, said that his association had agreed to everything but the three per cent salary increase.

"We are asking for a six per cent increase," Fusilier stated, "because only such an amount can protect our department from the recruitment tactics of higher paying local agencies."

Fusilier said that, with the three per cent increase in salary, Carmel police wages would be an average of 3.75 per cent below that of other Peninsula agencies.

The salary decisions, like the budgetary ones which will probably be finalized next week, were greatly influenced by the fiscal re-examination Carmel conducted this spring. The council, with the help of departmental reports and a study by consultant Melvin B. Steckler, has been attempting to stop the escalating cost of running the city of Carmel.

Since employee salaries and benefits make up the majority of Carmel's yearly costs, City Administrator Hugh Bayless was instructed to re-examine the city's employee classification and salary scale system. That study, reviewed and modified by city departments, revealed that many employees were near or over what Bayless found to be comparable salary ranges in other cities.

In granting an across-the-board raise of the new salary ranges, the council ruled out increases for 17 employees — most of them in public works — who were labeled "over range." The police department had one over range, fire had none, public works had 10 and other departments had three. Those employees will not receive further raises until their salaries come into future salary ranges.

The total number of employees whose salaries were at the top end of their scale, but not over, was listed as 14.

In changing its medical benefit policy, the council demonstrated its concern over the old self-insured plan which last year cost the city $85,000. The new plan will cost the city in the neighborhood of $65,000 next year.

The council okayed the spending of $70 per month per employee toward a medical plan from Cal West Insurance.

Under the Cal West Plan, $100 would be deductible per year with a $300 deductible limit for a family. In the hospital, the first $2000 would be paid in full through insurance, and thereafter 20 per cent of the bill would be paid by the employee. Dental, also with a $100 deductible, would have a limit of $1000 per year. No maternity, orthodontic or chiropractic work would be covered.

Under self insurance, the city gave 100 per cent medical coverage to employees, and in most cases the new plan represents a slight reduction in benefits.

Although mayor Eugene Hammond admitted that the evening's decisions might not satisfy all parties, he said everyone should be relieved because, "at least we're at the end."

The council is scheduled to hold a final meeting on Friday at 7:30 p.m. to adopt the 1976-77 budget for the city and to set the property tax rate for the city for this fiscal year.

OSHA conference planned

A series of six bimonthly half-day sessions on federal and California Safety and Health Act (OSHA) begins Wednesday, Sept. 8 in Monterey.

The seminar, scheduled for 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Monterey Holiday Inn, 2500 Sand Dunes Drive, is sponsored by the Central Counties Safety Council, formerly the Santa Clara County Safety Council, with the cooperation of Zenith National Insurance Company.

The six-session course will include speakers from government and industry, according to John C. Hall, safety council field representative. The course will cover the duties of the employer and employee under OSHA, inspections by the State department of Industrial Safety and OSHA citations.

Vern Cord, safety engineer with Zenith National, is course coordinator. Dates of the five subsequent class meetings will be announced at the first session.

Federal OSHA, signed into law in 1970, applies to employers engaged in business that affects commerce.

Big Sur moratorium petition criticized

By IRENE GAASCH

The old saying, "If you ask a fish about his world, the last thing he can describe is the water," may be a good way to portray the controversy centering around the possible moratorium on development for the Big Sur area.

Members of the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) generally agree that a moratorium on building in the Big Sur area would be beneficial in terms of guiding growth in the area. How to go about establishing this moratorium and what it should cover has not reached such an easy agreement. This is where the water looks different, depending on each person's point of view.

Last week at the request of some Big Sur residents headed by Zad Leavy, one of the cochairmen of the CAC, the County Planning Commission decided to recommend that the Board of Supervisors enact a moratorium on building in the Big Sur area. This could be done by a county ordinance for a period of four months without a public hearing.

Leavy says the group was not acting on behalf of the CAC, but only as concerned citizens who felt there should be some action now.

None the less, this action so angered CAC chairman Gary Koeppel that he described it as "manipulation by a minority faction." Koeppel said the decision not to ask for a moratorium was reached in the July 12 meeting of the CAC.

Koeppel explained that he and Leavy presented cases for and against the moratorium in hopes of settling the issue once and for all. "This issue had already occupied four of our committee meetings," said

Koeppel, who felt that it was taking precious time away from the original intent of the meetings, devising a master plan for the Big Sur area.

At that meeting, after hearing both factions, the committee voted 9 to 4 to reject the moratorium, continued Koeppel. He said he was "mildly outraged," as were a lot of the Big Sur citizens, that five people would take it upon themselves to speak for all the people of Big Sur.

"I don't object to a moratorium," said Koeppel, "it's the manner in which this took place. I feel it's a panic decision based on an hysterical presentation." He says the decision to enact a moratorium should be postponed until Big Sur citizens can hold a public meeting and make their own decision.

Leavy disagrees. He says most people in Big Sur do not want more development and have been disappointed in the CAC's decision.

He felt that Committee members who voted against the moratorium did so for commercial reasons, rather than the "surface reason" that people have not discussed the issue.

"Even though no town hall meeting had been held on this (moratorium) issue, we (the five committee members who signed the petition) felt there had been a careful examination of the issue," commented Leavy.

"No one in the Big Sur area wants the indiscriminate development that's been taking place in Palo Colorado. That place has been cut up like a bee hive," said Leavy. He said he, and four other committee members, felt that action was needed now.

"We acted on our own, not as members of the advisory committee," said Leavy. He pointed out that their main concerns were the time the planning process was taking and the water shortage. "We requested a moratorium on everything but single family dwellings," said Leavy.

He stated that the five people felt the CAC decision strongly favored the commercial interests in Big Sur. "Let's face it," said Leavy,

"one of the committee members is a road builder, another is an engineer that works in development, another is a real estate broker, while another is the wife of a real estate broker, and some represent business interests here. These people are not going to want to stop all development."

Leavy does not feel that any one of the CAC members is being devious. He just feels that they, like any person, are concerned with what is best for them and protecting their own interests. "I do feel they are a dedicated group," he said. "Whether they're protecting the coast or not, is another question."

"From the time we started working on the master plan for Big Sur, the county planners have recommended that we cut Big Sur development substantially," said Leavy. He said they suggested cutting development by one-fourth, and encouraged the CAC to make a public statement on the issue.

He, and the petition signers, Dr. Gordon Williams, Laurie Dillon, Myrtle Radcliffe, and Morley Baer, felt that the Board of Supervisors has had trouble holding the line on development. He points out that the supervisors have even over-ridden their own rules. (They now have a de-facto moratorium in force.) Leavy said, "If a developer is meeting the existing county plan, the supervisors do not turn them down."

Although the issue to consider enacting a moratorium is still on the Board of Supervisors agenda for the Aug. 24 meeting, planning commissioner Bill Peters, in response to a mailogram sent to him by Koeppel, said that he would recommend that the Board of Supervisors not consider the moratorium until the citizens of Big Sur were able to have a town hall meeting. According to Koeppel, this meeting could not take place until early September. Personally, Koeppel favors a moratorium but feels it should be for those people who pose a "real threat" to the Big Sur area. (Meaning those who plan to make major changes in the land).

Getting public input is an issue that just keeps the waters muddy, in Leavy's opinion. "It won't be critical if the moratorium doesn't go into effect now," Leavy said, "but we (the petitioners) feel it would be wise and helpful. He said he wanted the emphasis to stay on coastal protection, rather than focusing on issues or personalities, and would be happy to wait until there has been a public meeting on the issue.

Phase 1/2

Because of the current drought, water supplies available to California-American Water Company are limited and can only be replenished when sufficient rainfalls arrive. To protect these remaining supplies, Phase One-Half water rationing for all customers served by California-American Water Company has been ordered by the California Public Utilities Commission. This rationing is effective immediately and will remain in force until further notice.

Under Phase One-Half, outside use of water is restricted again, but not as strictly as under Phase One. Restrictions on outside water use now in effect are:

- Watering and irrigation by hose or sprinkler systems is limited to 7 to 9 a.m. and 5 to 7 p.m. on alternating days. Consumers whose street address ends with an odd number may water only on odd-numbered days. Those whose street address ends with an even number may water only on even-numbered days. For example, a consumer at 414 Franklin may water only on August 6, 8, 10, 12, etc.
- In the incorporated area of Carmel where there are no street addresses, consumers north of Ocean Avenue may water only on odd-numbered days and those south of Ocean Avenue may water only on even-numbered days.
- No water from hydrants may be used for construction purposes.
- Hard-surfaced areas such as driveways and patios may not be washed by a hose or water directly from a tap.
- Cars and other vehicles as outlined in the original order may not be washed by a hose or water directly from a tap.
- Water in containers not to exceed three gallons capacity may be used for plant watering, car washing or the cleaning of hard-surfaced areas at any time.

Penalties remain unchanged: First violation results in written warning; subsequent violations will mean restriction of flow at the violator's meter to a minimum for health and safety.

This water rationing order applies to all California-American Water Company customers. No exemptions to the Order can be made by the local utility. If you have questions, call the company's water answer desk at 373-3051.

Think Water Conservation. Every day.

DELIGHTFUL HIGH MEADOW TOWNHOUSE — Newly listed one bedroom unit professionally remodelled with addition of a den-loft, enlarged breakfast area, etc. A stone's throw to the tennis courts and pool. $59,900.

IF THIS HOME COULD ONLY TALK — what stories it could tell! South of Ocean on two level lots, we have listed the home of one of the old-time Carmel artists. The two-story living room with two north light studio windows and a balcony was the setting for many parties where Carmel artists gathered and displayed their paintings. There was one bedroom and bath with the original home and later a huge second bedroom with its own fireplace was added along with a large second bath. It has central heat and a big kitchen with many cupboards. It needs some sprucing up and decorating, but basically it is the essence of CARMEL CHARM. $120,000.

PRICE REDUCED on this Hatton Fields home which boasts over 3400 square feet of living area. There are three bedrooms and two baths in the main part of the house plus a huge room with its own bath which would make a great in-law apartment. The area can't be beat for weather, and its proximity to schools and shopping. If you can use this much space, you couldn't begin to build it for the new price of $105,000.

NEAR THE MISSION — adjoining a greenbelt, this family home has four bedrooms, a family room, den and two baths. Conveniently located to everything. Interestingly decorated. $104,500.

Your Storybook Castle In Carmel

"This castle hath a pleasant seat... Nimby and sweetly recommends itself Unto our gentle senses."

Shakespeare's Macbeth

It's a warm and friendly castle, where you can curl up beside the fire with a good book or sip a glass of wine with a few good friends. It's a house for conversational evenings, happy days in the sunny patio, putting in the charming stone studio, delightful meals a deux in the adorable little dining room. It's a house for lovers — of all ages.

It isn't big, but there are two bedrooms, two baths. It has the old-fashioned kind of plastered walls, lovely millwork, fascinating windows — and a MOST up-to-date kitchen. In your miniature Carmel castle, life is yours to enjoy without a lot of time on your part to maintain a big house. Even sprinklers in the terraced, easy-care garden.
